THE EARLY BIRDS WILL CAPTURE CONTEST TAWARDS

Those in Field Early Have Best Chance to Get the Valuable Prizes in Contest

Standings of Candidates Remain Stationary Today as the Votes are Not Counted Sunday, but Great Changes are Expected in List for Tomorrow's Paper

Another week of hard and energetic effort on the part of the candidates in the race for The Bulletin valuable awards has started in and startling changes in the standings of those in the contest can be looked for before it closes.

No Votes Counted Sunday.

No votes are counted Sunday and the standings of the contestants are the same as they were yesterday, no change being made. The votes will be counted today at the usual hour and it is predicted that surprises are in store for Tuesday's paper.

Time Flying.

The time in which to win these valuable prizes is flying fast and the end will be here ere we realize it. Some of the candidates who at the present time seem to imagine that they can wait several days, or weeks before starting out to see their friends, are going to meet with disappointment when they do so. Already the field has been prospected by energetic men and women, girls and boys, either getting the votes for themselves, or drumming up the campaign of some friend in the race. While the field is as yet virgin as it were, it will not long remain so that is a certainty, and those who delay getting out in the field are going to find themselves out of the contest when they do start. So the advice of the contest department is to "Get Busy" and do so as soon as possible.

Plenty of Support.

There is unlimited support in the field covered by this paper for those in the contest to secure votes and subscriptions. Now that the elections are getting close everyone wants a paper, and The Bulletin is the paper they want, they know that the political news is carried in The Bulletin in its entirety and is printed without fear or favor. This makes it a comparatively easy matter for the contestants to get subscriptions along these lines, and all that is necessary is the asking.

Ask and Ye Shall Receive. How true the above is, and particularly in this case. There is hardly a person in this city or the surrounding country who will not subscribe to The Bulletin if approached on the subject. Of course you must ASK to get these votes and subscriptions, you could hardly expect them to come to you in any other way. Although at the same time once you have made the start there will be many subscriptions paid into this office for the contestants which will necessitate no exertion on their part. Of course you cannot expect these subscriptions to come your way until you have made an effort yourself and shown a desire to be among the winners at the close of the contest.

Make This Week Count. Be the one to make the contest the more exciting this week by polling a large score and taking your place with the leaders.

You can do it and now is the time.

There is no better time during the contest to make a good determined start than right now. Get the start now and the end of the race will take care of itself. See all your friends this week and get the votes and subscriptions that will place you among the winners at the final count.

Contest Chatter. Remember the 10-vote coupon expires tonight, so see that yours are all in.

Hundreds of subscriptions waiting to be picked up by some bright, energetic enterprising contestant. Are you endowed with those qualities? If so, get after these subscriptions.

And hundreds of people have not been even approached for their subscriptions as yet. They are there for some one. Get them.

The contest will settle down into a pretty race from now until the closing date.

Never allow a day to pass without getting votes, it is the steady persistent worker who wins out in the end.

Great surprises are promised this week—Watch for them.

Household Ballistics. Mrs. Newbride—"Boohoo! Henry threw a biscuit at me. One that I made myself, too!" Mother—"The monster! He might have killed you!"
