Stocks, Bonds, Cereals

FALLING OFF IN NUMBER OF SHARES DEALT IN ON NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE IN MONTH OF AUGUST IS 14,000,000 COMPARED TO AUGUST LAST YEAR—THE POLITICAL CAMPAIGN, WITH ITS ATTENDANT HIGH TENSION TARIFF DISCUSSION, IS FACTOR BEARING ON STOCK MARKET—CLEWS SAYS THERE IS LITTLE OR NO DANGER OF MONETARY STRINGENCY THIS FALL—REGARDING THE CROP OUTLOOK—OUTPUT OF SECURITIES HAS DIMINISHED, WHICH IS SATISFACTORY.

Special.
New York, Sept. 3, 1910.

In August the number of shares dealt in on the New York Stock Exchange was only 10,000,000, compared with 24,000,000 a year ago. The sales of bonds during the same period were $31,000,000, as against $113,000,000. In each case the transactions were the smallest in any August for about ten years. This was rest with a vengeance. Such inactivity, however, cannot be expected to be permanent; and now that the vacation season is drawing to a close and many of the uncertainties which previously checked business are disappearing, it is reasonable to look for increasing activity during the remainder of the year. Since January 1 the number of shares of stock sold have aggregated 122,000,000, against 136,000,000 last year and 202,000,000 for the record year of 1901. In bonds he sales for the eight months amounted to $457,000,000 compared with $934,000,000 in 1909, which was the banner year. It certainly will not be charged that speculation in Wall street this year has been reckless or excessive. These figures prove that operations on the Stock Exchange for the last eight months have been conducted upon a strictly conservative basis.

The Political Campaign.
The political campaign which has aroused so little concern is now fairly under way and the issues are clearly defined. During the next two months we may look for a great deal of heated discussion; and through the smoke of political battle it will not always be easy to discern the final outcome. Nevertheless, the recent declarations of President Taft and Mr. Roosevelt have clarified the political horizon and served to make the issues plain. The tariff, the regulation of corporations and the important question of railroad rates are now the ruling issues and their agitation must leave a certain measure of uncertainty still to be reckoned with. Nevertheless, there is nothing alarming connected with any of these problems. It should not be forgotten that action always runs on more conservative lines than agitation. We are now in the period of disturbing agitation, which is apt to excite and mislead those who lose their balance. When it comes to positive action, conservatism will unquestionably rule, and those who in a spirit of vengeance seek to destroy the tariff, or the trusts, or the railroads will not prevail. It is easy to take an over-sensitive view regarding these problems. Politics may overshadow the outlook for some time to come, but the probabilities are that justice, order and good sense will rule in the long run.

Taft's Tariff Idea Good.
Referring to President Taft's recent tariff letter urging downward revision through schedules considered separately, the idea is not a new one, although a very good one. It was advocated by me over two years ago in a speech I made before the annual convention of the American Bankers at Providence, R. I., July 24, 1908, in which I said: "I am one of those who believe that the best interests of this country demand that the tariff should be simplified and gradually lowered, say one schedule at a time, with six months notice of any important change in it. This would enable importers to protect themselves sufficiently to avoid loss on their previous importations. The reduction of customs duties on commodities and articles of general consumption would obviously reduce the living expenses of the people, which are now so great as to be the chief source of the discontent of labor."

No Monetary Crisis.
One of the most important uncertainties which lately threatened the security markets has become a matter of history. There is now little or no danger of any serious monetary crisis this fall. Owing to the warnings issued months ago, and the precautions taken in consequence, the money situation is really far better than could have been expected. The interior banks will be able to meet crop requirements with little assistance from New York further than simply utilizing the balances which belong to them. The force liquidation of the last two months has accomplished important results. Financiers, manufacturers, and merchants alike have each been obliged to liquidate and shorten sail. The process was unpleasant, and in many cases involved severe losses, but the results are beneficial; and as a result it is safe to say that the financial and business situation in the United States is much sounder than it has been at any time since the panic of 1907. Firm rates for money are probable, and even desirable as a restraint upon imprudence, but the supply of loanable funds is quite abundant for all legitimate purposes. Any outbreak of excessive speculation would probably meet with a prompt check by the banks, and if conditions continue as satisfactory as at present, gold imports may be renewed at a later date.

The Crop Outlook.
Another element of uncertainty that has largely diminished is the crop outlook, which is also proving better than anticipated a month ago. The only real disappointment in this respect to cotton, the estimate for which varies from eleven and a half million to twelve million bales; a crop of at least 13,000,000 bales having been considered necessary from the business or economic standpoint. This misfortune will not fall entirely upon the United States, but will be shared by the whole cotton-consuming world. Our cotton manufacturers will necessarily be obliged to contend with very high prices for their raw material, but the south will secure ample compensation through the usual profits which cotton culture is just now affording them. So far as the south is concerned, high prices will be a good offset to any shortage in the crop. It will be another month or six weeks before the important staple is out of danger from frost. The wheat crop, if not as large as desired, is turning out better than anticipated in July. High prices here are also benefiting the grower, and no great decline can be anticipated in view of the fact that the world's yield is about 20,000,000 bushels less than last year. Corn, the most important crop to American interests, is making very satisfactory progress. There is now a good chance of our securing 3,000,000,000 bushels, and within a month the frost danger, which is diminishing daily, will be entirely eliminated. Though the price per bushel is lower, the value of this crop is quite likely to equal that of 1909. In fact it is not at all improbable that the combined money value of all our crops will equal the $8,750,000,000 of last year.

Securities Output Less.
Another satisfactory indication is the diminished output of new securities. This simply shows that the country is taking the much needed rest cure, the only remedy for past excesses, and the only highway to true recovery. It is possible that after the Labor Day holidays the market may undergo a further period of temporary unsettlement; yet good investments are selling at very low prices on present returns, and all of the known unfavorable conditions except politics seem to have been quite thoroughly discounted. It may be that the continued depression in business and political agitation will force prices to a still lower level; but on the other hand, the time is not far distant when Wallstreet will recover its nerve and begin to discount recuperation. General conditions throughout the country are sound, and as soon as the readjustment process approaches completion we may expect better prices for stocks. Meanwhile, continued caution is advisable until political possibilities can be more accurately measured.

HENRY CLEWS.

same time lifting the Teddy bears in salute.

"Why, hello," said the colonel. "This is fine. Never, in all the courts of Europe, did I see anything like this."

He stopped and talked to the little girls.

"I would like to stay longer and tell you some stories about lions in Africa, but some of you are so little."

felt will lay the corner stone of the Carnegie library. At Island park he made a speech. At night he goes to St. Paul and begins his journey homeward. He has passed through 14 states and travelled 2,700 miles.

When Roosevelt reached the hotel here he found 100 little girls waiting. They were sitting on the floor in the hotel parlor, and each had a Teddy bear in her arms. Some of the children were so little that they were all hidden by the bears. As soon as the colonel appeared they said: "Welcome, Teddy Roosevelt," at the ### Color Test For Florists.

The counter of a florist's shop was such an unusual place to find a basket of woolen threads that the curious customer was impelled to ask what business they had there.

"They have just been used for training a young man's sense of color," said the florist. "He has been working in our greenhouse on Long Island. He wants a position in a Broadway shop, but before he could be transferred he had to undergo the color test. Every man in a florist's shop must have as keen a sense for the different colors as a ribbon or silk salesman. This man passed the examination all right, but lots of men who know a good deal about flowers fall down on the color test." —New York Times.

Accuracy at All Costs.

The race was a neck and neck one. The spectators stood with bated breath. No sound was to be heard but the stampeding of the two horses' hoofs and the ticking of the timekeeper's double patent extra special fracto declino never stop stop watch.

"Dead heat!" roared the spectators.

A great roar rent the air. The timekeeper stepped forward and held up his hand.

"No, gentlemen!" he cried. "Betcher Boots was the winner. I timed him by this fracto declino stop watch. There are sixty seconds in a minute, sixty doodars in a second and sixty wiffwaffs in a doodar, and Betcher Boots won by a quarter of a wiffwaff!" —London Mail.

Teaching a Parrot.

"Don't try to teach Polly to talk unless she is perfectly tame and quite confident. Begin on a one syllable word without 'th' or 'ch' in it; then let her pronounce her name. Repeat the word you're trying to teach her endlessly and always in exactly the same tone of voice. If, as sometimes happens, Polly can't be taught to talk repeat over and over again a whistle, a catcall or any other unusual sound. This will teach her to imitate, and she may from that go to repeating words and sentences." —Suburbanite.

A Rare Luxury.

Every man has ideas in his mind. One of them, held almost universally, is to own two pairs of suspenders at once, so that he will not be obliged to change these valuable supporters continually from pants to trousers. Few achieve it, however. It is not a matter of money, for many well to do and even rich men are tied to one pair of suspenders through early habits of thought and training, inertia, absent-mindedness and the like errors. When we see a man who owns two sets of suspenders we say to ourselves, "There goes a king!" —Minneapolis Journal.

The Deacon's Doubts.

"I got ter preach a sermon 'bout de 'ol' man," said the colored deacon, "an' 'it I makes no doub' but Satap got him."

"Why," objected a brother, "be wuz a mighty good man."

"I well knows he wuz," replied the deacon, "but Satan got mighty queer ways 'bout him. He sometimes wants a salt ter season de soap!" —Atlanta Constitution.

Financial Disaster.

The Italian fruitree who had valiantly endeavored to instill true commercial instincts into the mind of his errand son was bewailing his fate at the offspring's perverse conduct:

"I leavs him for two minoot at a my stand, and whatsa you tink? He ruins the bus—total ruin. He sells the front row of the orange." —New York Times.

Good Luck.

Mr. Juggins—A black cat came to our back fence last night. Mrs. Juggins—Did it bring you good luck? Mr. Juggins—That's what it did. I hit it the very first time I fired.
