THE WEEKLY CAPITAL AND FARMERS JOURNAL, TOPEKA, KANSAS.

Every man and woman who wishes to have an intelligent idea of the political situation in the national campaign should take plenty of papers. First of all secure your home county paper, and after that send for the Weekly Capital and Farmers Journal the stalwart Republican weekly 8 pages, 56 columns, which will be sent to any address in Kansas, or to any person out of the State for the balance of 1884, for 50 cents. Send at once address J. K. Hudson Topeka, Kansas.

The Russian Mulberry.

This valuable fruit, forest, and ornamental tree was brought here by the Russian Meunonites. The tree is a very rapid grower. It will grow twenty feet high, and from six to eight inches in diameter in six years. Will make a fence post in five years growth that will outlast oak or cedar. It commences to bear when two years old and is a prolific bearer. The fruit is jet black and has a fine aromatic flavor, is used for desert as we use blackberries, splendid for canned winter use. It should be remembered that this tree will stand hot, dry weather better than ash or any other native tree. These trees can be had of the Blue Mound Nursery Co., Linn county, Kansas, in any quantity at $5 per hundred.

When to Cut Wheat.

In about three weeks the wheat harvest will be ready for the reaper. Bad straw, must and mildew, and the loss of much grain by shelling out, some or all of these will be the penalty for allowing the grain to stand until it is dead ripe. As to the quality of the kernel, the Germantown Telegraph remarks:

"It should be remembered that wheat is composed of gluten, starch and bran. Gluten is the nourishing quality of the grain which makes the flour stick together in the hands of the baker, and gives weight to the grain; and there is the greatest quantity of gluten in the grain just when the straw is yellow two or three joints from the ground, the head turns downward, and when you can wash the grains between the thumb and finger without producing any milk. It may, therefore, be set down as an indisputable truth that every day the wheat stands after this stage of ripeness, the gluten decreases in quantity and the bran increases in thickness, and thus diminishes in value, in addition to the danger from must and other risks. Besides early harvesting, where clover has been sown with the wheat, gives the young plant a better opportunity to push ahead so that it will afford earlier pasture at the beginning of autumn and thus provide excellent food for milk cows, it being at that time very nutritious, without the pasturing having any injurious effect upon the general crop the following year.

In fact, from a number of carefully noted experiments or tests made by intelligent farmers as to the results between early and late harvesting of the wheat crop, decided advantages in favor of the former have been clearly established."

We notice quite a number of the journals of the State speak very favorably of Dr. Wm. Bissell of Kirwin for the office of State Superintendent of Public Instruction. We feel confident to say that the doctor if elected will make one of the most efficient State Superintendents we ever had. The positions which he held in our Universities and colleges; the active part which he has taken in the educational field for a number of years is sufficient proof of his qualifications. That he is an earnest and effective worker in the educational field we have the assurance from the good work done in our county during his office of County Superintendent and a par tax in teachers institutes and other educational meetings.—Brookville Transcript.

Taking a Pill.

When a pill comes within the charmed circle of a person's teeth the throat kicks. It puts up the shutter and closes the door. It apparently desires to go out of business. The same throat may take in chunks of unchewable beefsteak as big as hickory nuts, and other stores for the interior department by the side of which a pill of the largest growth would be an insignificant affair, but it draws the line at pills. It shuts up shop and says to you just as plain as can be: "You don't send any pills past me if I know it." This action of the human throat in the matter of pills is very curious and mystifying to the ordinary mind, and we wonder that Matthew Arnold and other great thinkers have not given it more attention, and sought to make clearer for the rest of us the reason why the human throat is thus apparently so unreasonably.

You get about eleven or thirteen of these pills, big, smooth fellows rolling about in some sort of yellow powder, and you go home and take one of them according to the rules and regulations on the box. The whole family come into the room to see the performance, of course. They have taken pills in their time, and they know there is fun in a pill performance when they are spectators only. You probably say that you are not going to have any foolishness with that pill; you are just going to swallow it right down and be done with it. Then you take a pill out of the box, open your mouth, throw your head back, drop in the pill and make seven or eight desperate swallows. The pill comes smiling and with its yellow overcoat and a good deal of its high flavor worn off on your tongue, and you look a little disappointed.

Some one who has had a wider experience than the others with pills will tell you to try a swallow of water with it. All right. You're willing to take advice in this your hour of need. You drop the pill into your mouth and hastily drink a half a glass of water.

Where is the pill now?—Oh, it is snug enough down by the side of your tongue. It didn't go down with the freshest. It is now traveling by water this season. "Try some grated apple," suggests the person with the advice on tap. All right, bring the grated apple. You are willing by this time to try anything that promises to deceive your throat to letting that pill through. It is covered nicely in the very center of a spoonful of grated apple, and with a weak sort of a smile you throw your head back, put the contents of the spoon on your tongue and swallow—all the grated apple. The pill lingers for an instant about the palate, as if it had forgotten the password, and then comes slowly up to the teeth, leaving a good deal of its individuality all along its track.

Now bread is suggested for a disguise for the pill. This is a good idea. Why didn't some one think of that before? You chew up a whole mouthful of bread, put the pill in the middle of it and make the greatest effort of your life in the way of a single swallow. But the result is not satisfactory. The bread goes right along according to schedule, but the pill is side tracked and held for further orders. By this time a good part of your taste or a bad part of the pill is away, and you feel that you would know the rest of it by taste at any future time in your life. Further, there are the marks of bitterness and woe and hatred of the inventor of the pill stamped plainly upon your countenance, and mayhap your feelings are such that you cannot with seemliness express them in the bosom of your sympathizing family.

At last, just as you are about to give up in despair, some one suggests that the pill be snatched up and clothed in jelly. That is the best idea yet. Why wasn't it thought of sooner? The pill is mashed and clothed in jelly, and in a moment it has passed the guarded precincts of your interior department. It has gone at last, not in its original form, but as a broken package, and when you realize that the performance is over, your face lights up like that of the impudencious man who, in the dead of winter and at the driest hour of a mighty dry day finds a ten-cent bit in the pocket of a long discarded vest. To many of us there is not much fun in taking a pill.—[Middleton Transcript.]

REQUEST FOR INFORMATION.

In order to secure the greatest practical benefits of entomological science to the farmers and fruit-growers of the State, the State Board of Agriculture respectfully requests that information in regard to any and all insect depredations which may occur during the ensuing season, be sent at once to the Entomologist of the Board, Prof. F. H. Snow, Lawrence, Kansas. The information should be accompanied, wherever doubt exists as to the species, by specimens of the insect committing the depredation, together with as full an account as possible of the character of the depredation, whether it be upon the leaf, the stem, the root, the flower or the fruit of the plant attacked. The insect should be sent alive, if possible, and may be safely committed to the mails if inclosed in a stout pasteboard box (like a tin box), or in a small tin or wooden box. The postage on such packages is only one cent an ounce, if no writing be enclosed. The name or initials of the sender should be written upon the outside, together with the address; and a full account of the insect and its work should be sent by letter, in the same mail. Prof. Snow will furnish, from time to time, papers concerning noxious insects and how to destroy them, for publication in the reports of the Board, which are distributed to all parts of the State, and which will be sent to all those furnishing information on this subject.

The Cheerful Democrat.

The Commonwealth says: "Go down Kansas avenue on the west side, between Fifth and Sixth and listen to the one or two Democrats who are found there. They are the same men who were there four years ago. They are telling Republicans, who will listen to them now, as they did in those years, "we have got you now; we are sure to win; you had better come over to our side in time," etc., etc. We have heard this same talk all along at intervals of four years."

The same gentlemen may be found every day, in sunny weather, at some central location on the main thoroughfare of every city in Kansas. They are usually gentlemen who, from honorable financial beginnings, have obtained competence or wealth under Republican financial policies, which they have alternately denounced and approved. They are Democrats without knowing why; their actions being unaccountable, like those of the kangaroo, of whom the showman remarked: "But why he does as he does, ladies and gentlemen, God only knows, as his ears are like those of any other animal." They have lots of zeal without knowledge, and plenty of mouth without any sufficient reasons for using it. Take the platform just adopted at Chicago, and strike out the word "Republican" and insert "Democrat" and read it to them, and they will swear that it is exactly their doctrine, and on that platform the Democrats will sweep the country. They profess to believe whatever the Democrat party believes, and so change their doctrine every four years and never know the difference. They profess great reverence for old Sam Tilden, and declare him the greatest man this country ever produced, though were it needful to save their souls, they could not recall a single noble action of his life. Always whipped they are always confident; always changing, their talk is about the "eternal principles of Democracy." They illustrate by their cheerful volubility the old adage that "ignorance is bliss" and by their confidence the truism that "those who know nothing fear nothing."—Champion.
