can majority—yet it was the formal placing of Hodges in the governor's chair that attracted the attention of the crowd.

Not in recent years, perhaps never before in the history of the state, has such a crowd come to Topeka for an inauguration.

Early this morning it started all over again. There was the old hum of voices, the whisperings of the politicians and the clamor and rivalry for position.

The crowd a credit to the state. Yet it was a crowd that would have brought credit to a vain New York assembly.

As the crowd gathered, the new governor, several coaches were necessary to handle the crowds. Last night the hotel lobbies were crowded.

Early this morning it started all over again. There was the old hum of voices, the whisperings of the politicians and the clamor and rivalry for position.

Up Kansas, with the best of the young blood of the state and fighting spirit of the state's greatest school courses in every vein as they stopped in front of the hotel and played "The Gang's All Here."

Then the first carriage was called. As the door of the cab swung open, Governor Stubbs walked to the curb and stepped into the waiting vehicle.

Had representative hall been thrice its size, there would have still been a demand for seats from the people who desired to view the inauguration.

Chief Justice Johnston administered the oath to George H. Hodges, governor.

It was a representative crowd that left the state house shortly after noon today. From the homespun of former days to the fashions of the season were dressed the women who walked through the marble halls and down the granite steps of one of the most magnificent state buildings in the union.

Inaugural Reception Tonight. The inaugural reception will be held at the state house tonight. It is not a dress affair.

with increased activity. The farmers of Kansas received twenty-one million dollars for their butter, eggs and poultry last year, six millions more than the government paid for the Louisiana Purchase.

A Train From Topeka to New York. The drought of 1911 was the worst in the history of Kansas, yet the total farm income was newly created wealth of a million dollars a day.

We have a million acres and more of virgin soil hungering for human skill to shape its agricultural destiny. Multiple wealth in raw materials yet untouched, boundless areas of artesian rivers and lakes underlie the surface of western Kansas land.

Urges Building of Roads. We should build permanent dirt roads and bridges that will outlast the day and generation of the farmer who will have no other outlet for his products.

HODGES' SPEECH. (Continued from Page One.) letter, but to the intent and spirit as well, must be charged not only to the Democratic members in part but to our party in general.

The completion of the Panama canal will speedily change the commercial world, and perhaps strange commercial activity will beat against the border of our state.

More Business and Less Politics. Kansas needs more business and less politics; more pulling together and less pulling asunder.

or spirit for the common good of Kansas. We have a greater number of progressive laws upon our statute books now than any other Commonwealth.

The development of a state depends upon those who plan and those who carry. With good roads the whole year round, giving our farmers a better market for their products.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

Until a short time ago, scarcely one person in a thousand had ever tasted a really good soda cracker—as it came fresh and crisp from the oven.

Now every man, woman and child in these United States can know and enjoy the crisp goodness of fresh baked soda crackers without going to the baker's oven.
