In Overalls, Rev. J. W. Waldron Preaches Labor Sermon. Standing Room Not Let at Methodist Church. GIVES BOTH SIDES. Says Capital and Labor Are Both Selfish. "Need More Stones and Bristows," Declares Pastor.

In overalls, preaching in a church from which many had to be turned away because of lack of even standing room, Rev. J. W. Waldron, pastor of the Kansas Avenue Methodist church, last night gave a talk to and for the laboring men. A quartet also dressed in work clothes sang.

The minister said that he wished that there were more Bristows and Stones in politics, and declared that the strife between labor and capital which dated at least from the time of the Pharaohs would not be settled until some leader arose from labor environment and showed his people the best solution for all concerned.

In the revolving period of time's busy march, with its gigantic accomplishments, we have this question of man's inhumanity to man unsettled. It is not a modern question alone, when the pioneer statesman of history (Moses) looked down upon the injustice of an ancient Pharaoh, and smote one of the leaders and drivers with his strong arm and buried him in the sand, till now we have been battling with this great issue and it is yet unresolved.

The worker declares in glaring language that his rights are trampled under foot and that no sufficient reward is received for his toil. "The employer denies the charge, declaring that the toiler is unjust, unreasonable and dishonest."

"We can not afford to sit down and fold our arms, for the problem I have spoken of can not be brushed aside. The masses will not rise unless we are supposed to be leaders smile and wink at the proposition any longer."

Wrong on Both Sides. Both from the working man and the rich man and all because whenever opportunity presented itself they have created trouble for the other side and their followers to worship it, and the name of that God is Selfishness. There never was a time when the leaders of labor needed the thought of redemption. It was a question of paramount importance in the discussions of the day, and many a despot trembled on his throne.

"Today the question that is forcing itself to the forefront is that of social reform. It means that some man, cradled in the lap of riches, with the thought of money must be selected to lead the world's labor army out from the land of Monopolistic bondage, into the land of justice and liberty."

"No man need be ashamed that he is a workman. The worst and most thrifless classes of human kind are found at the extreme ends of the pendulum, the ranking, worthless tramp and the arrogant aristocrat who idly rolls around in luxury, through money obtained by speculation, extortion or inheritance."

Need Men Like Stone and Bristow. "What we need is more men in our legislature who are in sympathy with the labor world, in particular do we need to send to Washington individuals who are interested in the masses and not in the classes. I wish you would send some Bristows and a few more Stones who think that there is a compensation coming to the laboring man and work to see that it is not lost."

Drooping shoulders, hoop skirts, and a dependent attitude for women have all gone out of style, and the woman who goes about "making a noise" like a clinging vine is now the one who is conspicuous among a sisterhood of straight-front, clear-thinking, freespoken women.

A visitor of the new order from Down East spent Saturday and Sunday in Topeka, and Saturday afternoon she made an address to about a hundred women who were guests of Mrs. W. A. Johnston in the sun parlor of the Virginia. Mrs. Helen Brewster Owens used to live in Kansas. She was born in Lynn county, and was educated at the state university at Lawrence.

After her graduation she taught in the Lawrence high school, and later went to Chicago where she took her doctor's degree. She is a Kansas man, who was also a graduate of K. U., and the Chicago university, and they went to Ithaca, N. Y., to live. Professor Owens is a member of the faculty of Cornell university, and Mrs. Owens, a few years after the birth of her two daughters, entered the university and took her Ph. D. degree. She is the second woman, and the last so far, to take a degree from the mathematics department of Cornell, and the second and last woman to graduate from the college after marriage.

When she heard that the amendment for the enfranchisement of the women of Kansas would be voted on next Fall, she desired her help in the campaign, and she has come to spend six or eight weeks in the work without charge in this state. She left Sunday night for Kingman, and will spend a large part of her time in the west and south parts of the state. In her address to the women at Mrs. Johnston's party Saturday, she spoke of the justice and expediency of the measure granting the ballot to women, and emphasized the fact that the men of Kansas were committed to the ballot for women, and that the men of Kansas were committed to the ballot in school, bond, and municipal affairs. She explained how Kansas women had camped in tents near the Convention hall, and how the men of the state were considering the granting of school suffrage to women, and how later the bill giving them the right of school affairs was interpreted so as to exclude them from voting for county and state school officers.

Mrs. Owens is quite a pretty woman, with a pleasing and a kind charm of manner. She wore at the party Saturday a gown of mode colored silk, the bodice draped, and the skirt was made with a short train, and opening at one side, was attached to a band of satin from the waist to the hem of the skirt.
