\textit{The Topeka Daily State Journal—Monday Evening, December 19, 1910.}

JOURNAL ENTRIES

\textbf{JAYHAWKER/JOTS}

The story of Kansas is a story of joy. There would be a dozen new things for the traveler who could visit the State for a year, if he could get the thrill of the first trip over.

\textbf{FROM OTHER PENS}

\textbf{A BRIEF PUBLISH}

The first thing that one notices in Kansas is the enthusiasm of the residents. From the smallest town to the largest city, the people are proud of their State and its history.

\textbf{WHEN I GOT TIME}

\textbf{THE EVENING STORY}

\textbf{Man Wanted.}

\textbf{BAD HERRING}

The buds of Kansas are in the very heart of the State. The people are proud of their State and its history.

\textbf{CAPITAL OFFENSES}

The buds of Kansas are in the very heart of the State. The people are proud of their State and its history.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

A boy is an in-between creature. They can never decide whether he was created to be a man or a boy. The boy is a mixture of the two, never entirely one or the other. He is always in a state of transition, always changing and growing.

\textbf{POUNDED PARAGRAPHS}

When a man attempts to look pretty, he usually ends up looking foolish. The same is true of a woman. She who attempts to look pretty by dressing up in the latest fashion is likely to end up looking ridiculous. The best way to look pretty, my dear, is to be yourself.
