

THE RELIGIOUS WORLD.

What the Church Folks Are Thinking About and Doing Religious News From Everywhere.

A Round-the-World Current.

The International Sunday School Lesson for June 30 is, "A Temperance Lesson," 1 Cor. 10:23-33. The Golden Text is, "It is Good Neither to Eat Flesh, nor to Drink Wine, nor anything Wherewith Thy Brother Stumbleth," Romans 14:21.

BY WILLIAM T. ELLIS.

There is a deal of unbelieved Christianity in the world in these days. The tidal wave of named socialism that seems to be sweeping over the whole earth, after all, but a faint expression of the New Testament principle to which the Sunday schools this week give attention. The student unrest in Japan, the excitement in India, the spectacular awakening of China, the struggle of Korea for the national existence, the portentous Swedish movement in India, the mutterings of the "Young Egypt" party, the dominance of laborism and liberalism in British politics, and the powerful social ferment in the United States, may all reasonably be interpreted as widely separated specimens of the one underlying sentiment of individual liberty and social interdependence. Consider, at least, all of these manifestations, look to the betterment of the common welfare and the enlargement of personal rights and independence.

Old-fashioned Up-to-Dateness.

Everybody is under obligations to all. That is, broadly stated, the day's platform. Yet what is that but the Pauline teaching, set forth in the present Sunday school lesson? "Let no man seek his own, but each his neighbor's good." Or, again, "Not seeking my own profit, but the profit of the many." There you have what the tracta used to call "fruits of the time." He is a dull teacher indeed who can not point this lesson with illustrations not a few from the days' news. In truth, the coincidence following the theme of this lesson and the thought of the day is most extraordinary.

The world's socialism is seeking the goal long ago indicated by the apostle, even though it know it not. The days "advanced" thinkers may consider themselves ahead of the old-fashioned book; but in truth the value of following up to it. There may be an atmosphere of novelty and progressiveness about espousing the cause of the common weal, as set forth under various names, by the indisputable fact that this has been the message of Christianity for centuries. The Christian church at its purest has presented the nearest to an ideal social condition that the world has ever seen.

Ill-Founded Temperance Teaching.

In the present instance, this big truth, which Jesus embodied in his life and his followers set down on the sacred page of the bearing upon the temperance question, which once a quarter is designated as the theme of the Sunday school. Herein is found the most unassailable basis for the temperance position.

When children are taught, with more than truthfulness, that only bad people ever drink intoxicants, they grow up to learn that the teaching is not true. When they are told that to taste liquor always brings drunkenness and ruin they are certainly later to discover the falsity of this instruction. When it is represented to them that the drinking of wine is forbidden by Scripture, their own intelligent reading eventually controverts the statement. No man can ever know how much temperance instruction has fallen to the ground in failure because based upon these unsound foundations.

A Man's Noblest "Right."

But when the Pauline position of noble altruism is taken—"give no occasion for stumbling"—surrendering one's lawful rights during the middle of the day to listen to General Booth who spoke at the board of trade and to the story of medical missionary work in Labrador as told by Dr. Wilfred Grenfell at the Canadian club.

A Forward Step toward Merging the Indians into American Citizens.

A forward step toward merging the Indians into American citizens has recently been inaugurated by the appointment of Dr. Charles A. Eastman, a graduate of Boston university and a full-blooded Sioux Indian, empowering him to give a new name to each of the Indians of the Sioux nation. He has already named 15,000, and it is estimated that the work will occupy him for two years. In selecting the name for the people themselves are consulted, and an entirely new name is not given if it can be avoided.

SEVEN SENTENCE SERMONS.

"When the great pageant of the year we see once beginning. We know that life again the victory 'O'er Death is winning.'"

The secret of success lies in the man and not in the stuff he works on.—Bradford Torrey.

Life alone can rekindle life; what others give us is not our own, but our hunger, but our bread and our gourd.—Amiel.

There are millions of loving thoughts and deeds. All ripe for awakening. That never would start from the world's cold heart.

But for sorrow and suffering.—Robert Beverley Hale.

It is a good thing to be rich and a good thing to be strong, but it is a better thing to be beloved of many friends.—Euripides.

Dare to be true, nothing can need a lie.

A fault which needs it most, grows two thereby.

"They have hope of victory who endure."

RELIGIOUS THOUGHT.

Gems Gleaned From the Teachings of All Denominations.

Home largely makes us what we are and the homes we create reveal our ideal of life, what we apply to ourselves and refuse to apply where aid can be had deserves to suffer, but he who comes to the fountain of supply

God's Way.

God's way is God's way for each of us in our own life. Let us grasp the serpent, that it may become a rod.—Rev. Dr. Charles F. Aked, Baptist, New York.

GOD'S WAY.

God's way is God's way for each of us in our own life. Let us grasp the serpent, that it may become a rod.—Rev. Dr. Charles F. Aked, Baptist, New York.

MOST SUBLIME TRUTHS.

The loftiest truths, the most sublime of all that engage human thought, are those that have God for their subject and the things of God for continued contemplation.—Rev. Dr. S. K. Spahr, Methodist, Allegheny, Pa.

CS TO AVOID.

Four C's we are to avoid—criticize, condemn, crucify and then canonize. Speak to the ear while it can hear. Make living hearts beat faster with your kind words. Show while the benefactor lives.—Rev. W. C. Bittling, Baptist, St. Louis.

A CHOICE BLESSING.

A happy marriage and growing home are among the choicest of God's blessings on this earth, and he who regards the eternal and divine law of self-making companionship between a man and one woman will possess it.—Rev. Dr. Robert J. Kent, Congregationalist, Brookline.

A DENOTER OF CHARACTER.

Amusement very often determines the full character of the individual, and just as a person can be judged by the company he keeps, so he is judged in like manner by the recreations he pursues.—Rev. Dr. Madison C. Peters, Baptist, New York.

PAIRES.

Earthly failure should never discredit or daunt a man who believes in the life everlasting. Failures are a prophecy of glory yet to come, and the short of one's highest aspirations.—Rev. Dr. Charles E. Jefferson, Congregationalist, New York.

TO BE HAPPY.

Remember three things: That in order to please God we can't live in the world; that in order to be happy we must let love prevail. In order to be happy we must lay aside all prejudice and know no envy toward any human being.—Rev. Nelson M. Mayall, Free Will Baptist, Fishing Creek, Pa.

MOST URGENT NECESSITY.

This is a thoughtful age. Men are busy, but about us there is a passion for new ideas. But our most urgent necessity is not of idea, but of power. What we need most of all is not schooling, but baptism, and that is to come through faith.—Rev. E. A. McFadden, Presbyterian, Danvers, Mass.

CAPITAL FOR LIFE'S WORK.

God has placed within our reach all that is necessary to insure success against failure in life's work. There is no lack of capital for the one who is determined to succeed. The capital is found in what is below, within and above us.—Rev. A. H. Herries, Presbyterian, Union City, Pa.

A NATION PROGRESSES.

Our country rises or falls as we fulfill our duties as citizens or as we neglect them. And if history teaches us anything it teaches us that a nation lives and progresses as it is energized by moral and spiritual forces. Faith and hope and love must lie as the foundation for any superstructure of life, be it individual or national.—Rev. Dr. Robert Ogden Kirkwood, Presbyterian, Cincinnati.

TO HAVE CHEER.

Have God and you shall have cheer. This is adequate. Nothing can be added. Nothing can dissolve that. Nothing can fluster that. Nothing can bluster that. Nothing can wreck that ship. "What have you?" "It is I, my brother, cheer." I think it divinely desirable to have the glad heart. I think it divinely desirable to have the glad Christ. Now, that is the Jesus recipe for cheerfulness—to have the cheer of William A. Quayle, Methodist, Chicago.

FOR PRACTICAL SERVICE.

The church is beginning to wake up to the fact that it should not work to save itself, but to save society. In the best sense of the word the minister is a promoter. The church is not a club for the discussion of spiritual subjects with the minister as a lecturer. There is a tremendous movement among a better and more helpful line than that of lecturing on theological subjects. The church is organizing for practical service. The church should not be concerned with legal or political reforms excepting indirectly. Its duty is to educate the conscience of the people. The work of bringing about social, political and economic reforms does not belong to the church, but to the church members.—Dean Shaller Mathews, Evangelical, Chicago.

Secretary Root delivered the Dodge lectures on "The Responsibilities of Citizenship" at Yale last year, and his addresses were published in book form on June 22d by the Scribners. The title of the book is "The Citizen's Part in the Government and the Duties of the Citizen." The book is a collection of addresses given by Secretary Root during his year as Secretary of the War Department. The book is a masterpiece of clear, logical, and forceful writing. It is a book that every citizen should read.

May E. Southworth is to add to her series of Epicurean Thrills three new volumes, each of the regulation "101." They are "101 Layer Cakes," "101 Desserts" and "101 Oyster Receipts." The publishers, Paul Elder & Co., announce that they are in press for early publication. They have also nearly ready a series of six cook book book-markers, selected by Mrs. Southworth. "Welsh Rarebit Supreme," "Marshmallow Cream Layer Cake," "Oyster Salad," "Fruit Cocktail," "Flanked Fish" and "Patatas Con Queso" are to be the subjects. Paul Elder & Co. of New York are the publishers.

English reviewers are notoriously critical of American novels; and this fact gives special significance to the success attained in England by William Stearns Davis's "The Master of Stair." It is doubtful if any of the novels of the year has been more highly praised. For instance, Mr. C. E. Byles in the Daily Chronicle does not hesitate to couple Mr. Davis's name with that of Sir Walter Scott, commenting on the book in the following words: "This is a historical romance

Chief cause of the substitution of "The Master of Stair" for "The Leopard and the Lily" an earlier written story, was the approaching sale at Sotheby's of a letter containing the order for the Massacre of Glencoe dated February 14 1692. The letter was from Major Duncannon to Captain Robert Campbell and it is ascertained that the gift of it was among some old papers in Australia.

Now that the season is over, and a casting up of accounts is possible, a summary of "Mr. Hammerstein's Service to Opera" and an authoritative estimate of its place in the development of our musical life should be of interest. Such an article has been prepared for the July Century by Mr. Richard Aldrich, music critic of the New York Times, who believes that the greatest and most characteristic gift of the new opera house to the musical public was the "intimate" quality in operas to which intimacy belongs."

In a long article upon Mark Twain, written on account of his receiving an honorary degree from Oxford university, the London Spectator speaks of him in the highest terms, as a man as well as a writer, and also writes in picking out choice morsels of his humor. What strikes the Spectator as being among the things that are most extremely peculiar about Twain's stories is his editing an agricultural paper; of how, in the columns of that paper, he advised that "Turnips should never be pulled; it injures them. It is better to send a boy up and let him shake the tree," and of his putting forth the information that "the guano is a fine bird, but great care is necessary in rearing it."

A most important and unique contribution to art criticism appears in the July Scribner, and the surprising fact is that this is the first time it has ever been translated into English. In 1656 Velasquez wrote a series of comments upon a collection of paintings given by Philip the IVth to the Monastery of San Lorenzo. These brief notes, known as the "Memoria of Velasquez," have been translated by Walter Farrar, an American artist, who also writes an introduction giving the history of the origin and the impression they have made upon various special students of the great Spaniard's life and work. They are most interesting impressions, among others of pictures by Veronese, Titian, Correggio, Raphael and Michelangelo. The article is illustrated from photographs of some of Velasquez's most notable paintings.

A recent letter from Mrs. Williamson throws some light upon the sources from which she and her husband derived the idea for their new book, "The Princess Virginia," which has just been published by McClure, Phillips & Co.

"The Princess Virginia," which has just been published by McClure, Phillips & Co. was begun when we were staying at an old castle in the Austrian Tyrol. Partly the idea of the heroine came to us from Princess Helena D'Orleans, who used to live near Kingdon in an old house lent by the queen. She was such a pretty girl, so full of fun and high spirits, and thought of such amusing things to do. She and Princess Maud, now queen of Norway, used both to take the name of Miss 'So-and-So' and go about visiting their companions. We were in Austria just at the time when one of the Austrian grand dukes was about to make one of the romantic love matches given at the time of the emperor's birthday; so altogether this is the way the story came to us, and of course it isn't half as romantic as the real story of the old emperor's love and courtship, when he met his poor, beautiful, murdered empress. Now for the hero. He came to us in this fashion: The German nobleman goes and shortly incognito with an aide-de-camp or two, or did a few years ago, and at one time he had a rather wonderful but somewhat like me, described in the book, but the Princess Virginia's hut was exactly like one in the mountains of the Tyrol belonging to one of the Austrian noblemen and we had lunch there, but there wasn't quite such a scramble to reach it as that which is in the story."
