

CASE 113 Emile Gaboriau

These conditions seemed quite to suit Faucherot. "I will be discreet," he said. "I shall rely upon you. Now, to begin, you must carry this photograph to the judge of instruction. I know M. Patritige is much perplexed about this case. Explain to him as if it came from you alone what I have just shown you. Repeat what I have demonstrated, and I am convinced that this evidence will determine him to release the cashier. Prosper must be at liberty before I can commence my operations."

that the accused will be released tomorrow. He began at once to write out one of those terrible decisions of "Not proved" which restores liberty, but not honor, to the accused man; which says that he is not guilty, but does not say he is innocent: Whereas there do not exist sufficient charges against the accused, Prosper Bertomy, in pursuance of article 113 of the Criminal Code we hereby declare that we find no grounds for prosecution against the accused at this present time, and we order that he shall be released from the prison where he is confined and set at liberty by the jailer, etc.

"None. Yet I shall succeed, because when a man devotes his whole life to an object he is certain to achieve it." "Well said, M. Prosper, and, to be frank, I fully expected that this would be your purpose. I have therefore already begun to think and act for you. I have a plan. In the first place, you will sell this furniture, quit this house and disappear."

main in Paris. "And if it is never explained?" "Only the more reason for your remaining in oblivion. I have been talking about you to Clameran. You are unjust to him, for he is your friend. If I were in Prosper's place," he said, "I would turn everything into money and embark for America. There I would make a fortune and return to crush with my millions those who have suspected me."

"Oh, ho!" cried M. Verduret. "What is this?" Then, turning toward the porter, he said, "Wait till I return." He went into the next room and closed the door. There he found Prosper, who had heard the bell ring and was anxious to know what was going on. "Here is a letter for you," said M. Verduret.
