A Very Strange Story

Remarkable Experience of a Boston Man in Europe.

What He Found in Switzerland and Brought Back to America.

"I've got a story to tell," said one of the best known business men in Boston to a party of friends. "It's the strangest, most remarkable experience through which I ever passed. Here, all of you have a cigar, while I proceed.

"I was on a pleasure trip in Europe last summer with my family. Of course, we had to see Paris, and while out riding my wife fell from the carriage. She hurt her ankle dreadfully. The doctor said a bone was cracked and three ligaments were broken. Anyhow, it was a bad accident. She couldn't walk—couldn't bear her weight on the foot. The doctor put all sorts of mixtures on the ankle—tried everything. He had it massaged twice a day—morning and evening—but that didn't do any good. My wife was in bed three weeks.

"My wife fell from the carriage."

"The doctor said one day: 'That ankle will mend in the course of time, but you want to take your wife away from Paris to some quiet place.' So I packed up and went to a little village in Switzerland. My wife had to be carried to and from the train. She was positively helpless.

"After we arrived in the village, I sent for another doctor. He came, and said the only way to cure that ankle was to have it massaged twice a day. I didn't have much faith in it, but what could I do? I employed a native woman to massage the ankle, and she came morning and evening for fifteen days.

"I employed a native woman."

"The ailing ankle didn't improve, so I said to the native woman, 'Give me your bill. I want to pay you. We are going to leave tomorrow.'

"The woman remarked that if we would put off our departure for a day, she would bring something to rub on the foot that would cure it. That seemed queer to me, why hadn't she brought it before? I suppose she wanted her engagement to last as long as possible.

"Well, we waited a day, and the next morning the woman came with a queer looking green oil in a bottle. This she rubbed on my wife's ankle. In about two hours my wife said:

"'Why, my foot feels all right now.' And she stood up and walked. I was astounded. It didn't seem possible, but it was so, just the same.

"I said to myself: 'If that queer oil can relieve a pain in two hours that the doctor couldn't cure in six weeks it must be a most wonderful thing, and I'm going to find out all about it.'

"I hunted the woman up and asked: 'Where did you get that oil?'

"'My grandfather makes it,' she replied.

"'Who is your grandfather?' was my next question.

"'O, he lives in such-and-such a street.

"'Will you take me to see him?'

"'Yes.'

"I said I wanted to find out what the oil was made of, but the woman replied:

"'My grandfather won't tell you. He keeps it secret. He makes a living from it. He sells it to people around here to cure rheumatism, lumbago and all kinds of bodily aches and pains.'

"He was a picturesque old fellow."

"I was bound to see that grandfather, and I did. He was a picturesque old fellow, about 75 years old. I told him I wanted the recipe of his oil. He wouldn't tell it. It was his only means of living, and he was afraid I was going to run opposition to him, I suppose. He didn't even have a name or label for it, and sold it here and there in the neighborhood for 2 francs a bottle. He had been doing so for many years, and the folks around there told wonderful stories of what the oil had done for them.

"Finally I convinced him that I was going back to America, and simply wanted the recipe in preference to carrying a quantity of the oil. Then he sold me the recipe.

"My wife having recovered we went back to Paris. I took the recipe to one of the best chemists in the city to see if the old fellow in Switzerland had fooled me by giving me a worthless formula. The chemist analyzed a small quantity of the oil I had retained, and found that the recipe was precisely the same.

"The same chemist told me that the oil was the best preparation he had ever seen in his life for curing pains and aches of every nature. It was simply wonderful. The green color, he said, came from a rare herb that grows only in a certain part of Switzerland. This herb, he declared, was used in no other liniment or pain killer. While the other ingredients were well known to the medical profession as antidotes for pain, the green herb added the greatest value to the oil.

"Of course I was pleased, but the matter soon passed from my mind, and after a while we went to Berlin. The day of our arrival the weather was cold, raw and nasty. The wind made you feel like a sieve—it went right through you. The sudden change brought on a terrible cold in my chest. The pain was acute, and seemed to go through me all at once. I felt I was done for—couldn't breathe—thought I was going to die. Don't laugh—that's just how it was. I couldn't go downstairs to breakfast. Had to lie down. Told my wife to send for a doctor. I was in such pain I never thought of the oil, but my wife did. She remembered her ankle. She got some one in the hotel to rub it on my chest, and in two hours I was as well as I am this minute. The oil did wonders for me as well as for my wife. Do you blame me for being enthusiastic about it?

"My little girl about that time suffered with swollen tonsils. Couldn't eat. Couldn't swallow. I thought of the oil, rubbed it on her throat, and, presto! the trouble was gone.

"After I got to London I began, as one in my position naturally would, to look for people who suffered from pains. I wanted to try this green oil on them. As might be supposed, I found plenty of patients. You know how things and occurrences of this sort all 'happen' about the same time. I didn't know anything about medicine, but I did know this oil was a mighty good article.

"Rubbed it on my chest."

"About the first person I met in London was the manager of a famous theatrical star. He had been out bicycle riding. Rode too far and too fast on a hot day, like so many other folks. When he got back to the hotel he was so stiff he couldn't get out of bed the next morning. I told him I had something that would fix him all right, and got a valet to rub the green oil on him. It took all the stiffness out of his limbs at once. He was up and around in almost no time.

"Coming over on the steamer I met an old friend—one of the biggest dry goods merchants in Syracuse, N. Y. He walked as though he had a stiff neck and back.

"I said: 'What's the matter with you?'

"'Lumbago,' he replied.

"I got a steward to rub some of the oil on the merchant."

"That was enough for me. I got a steward to rub some of the oil on the merchant, and then he was all right. Cured completely.

"One old fellow on the steamer was lame, and always sat in a certain corner with one foot on a chair. I asked him what the trouble was, and he pointed to his heel. Said it was so sore he could not walk; had been that way a long time; couldn't find relief in anything. Thinks I, 'That's easy for the oil.' I gave him a bottle, and he used it. The last I saw of him he was tramping up and down that deck like a good fellow. He said the oil was mighty good stuff.

"On arriving in this country I went to Newport, and there met an old friend in the person of a Pennsylvania judge—one of the greatest jurists in the Keystone State. He walked like the Syracuse merchant—he had lumbago still worse. What is the use of going into details? I gave him some oil and it attended to the lumbago. The judge was cured absolutely.

"Then another friend—a New York merchant prince—came along with a felon on his finger. It nearly drove him mad. The pain was excruciating. He put some of the oil on that finger, and it took all the pain out. The swelling and the inflammation disappeared.

"I've tried this oil so often—I've tried it on every kind of pain, ache and inflammation—that I will stake my reputation on the statement that it will cure more ailments than anything else that human man ever put together. It is a positive remedy for rheumatism. I have living, breathing faith in it. It is that green herb from Switzerland that gives it the almost miraculous curative virtues. It is this herb that gives it the green color, and it is the green of Nature.

"There you have my story, gentlemen. Every word is true as Gospel, and the half has not been told. I have such unbounded confidence in the preparation that I have organized a company for its manufacture and invested a lot of cash in it. You all know me as a conservative man, and every cent I put up goes into something which I positively know to be meritorious.

"The name is Omega Oil. It is not like anything else in America. It is no more like other liniments than high noon is like midnight. It contains vegetable substances that you have never tried before. You must not judge it by other liniments. You must not say it will not cure your pains and aches, because it will.

"It will penetrate to your very bones, and soothe, soften and subdue the hurting. There is nothing in it except what grows out of the ground. It has the beautiful color of Nature—it is a sparkling emerald green. Rub it in freely. It will not blister or burn the skin. Rub it in and the hurting will stop."

"Took all the stiffness out of his limbs."

Omega Oil cures Weak Backs, Lame Shoulders, Tired Arms and Legs, Stiff Elbows, Wrists, Fingers, Knees, Ankles and Joints, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Neuralgia, Sore Throat, Cold in the Chest, Sore Muscles, Aching, Itching, Sore, Swollen, Tired, Sweaty Feet. A godsend to old people. Freshens, invigorates and strengthens the muscular tissues after hard exercise, hard work or hard pleasure. Good for everything a liniment ought to be good for.

Your druggist either sells Omega Oil or he can get it if he wants to. If he tells you he has not got it, you tell him he can get it of any jobber in medicines. It is his duty to sell it. It is his duty to serve the community with liniments and medicines that really cure. Goodness knows, there are enough that don't cure.

Never take a substitute for Omega Oil. If your druggist persistently refuses to give what you ask for, the Omega Chemical Co., 257 Broadway, New York, will mail you a bottle, prepaid, for 50 cents in cash, money order or stamps.

THOSE TURKEYS.

Side Lights on Wells Fargo Gifts to Employes.

One of Them Says It Is Engendering Ill Feeling.

USED FOR ADVERTISING

At the Same Time Hires Cheap Men.

Different View From That Usually Taken by Public.

Do the Wells Fargo employes appreciate the generosity of the company in giving each man a turkey with "trimmings" on Thanksgiving and Christmas?

It is natural to suppose that they do, but as a matter of fact, there are hundreds of them who denounce the donation in bitter language. If the big men in the Wells Fargo company should get their ears down to the grass roots they would hear a tremendous amount of suppressed condemnation for the supposed kindness which annually costs the company not less than $25,000.

Strange as it may seem, the yearly gift of turkeys seems to be kindling a spirit of dissatisfaction among the men, instead of knitting the good will of the employes to the interests of the company. Not only in Topeka is this spirit manifest, but all over the country, to a greater extent in some places than in others. Topeka seems to be one of the centers of the whirlwind of dissatisfaction which is constantly growing in strength.

"Look here," said an old employe of the company, who of course refused to jeopardize his job by allowing his name to be mentioned in the press, "do you know what the Wells Fargo men really think about this turkey business? Well, I'll tell you, and I hope that the officials of the company will read what I say, and change their plans. The express employes think that the free distribution of turkeys is a gigantic advertising scheme. When the plan was originated it may have been in good faith, with a desire to give the men some token of appreciation. But now it is simply a cold-blooded advertising scheme. The newspapers in the country, within the next week or two, will print thousands upon thousands of complimentary items about the Wells Fargo company, how generous they are to their employes, and how the employes love the company, and all that sort of stuff. The company can well afford to pay $25,000 for an advertising scheme which will produce such results. It is something which appeals strongly to the popular feeling.

"But there is another side of it which is even more important to the men on this division. I do not know how it is on other parts of the line, but I speak for this division in particular. The superintendent out here is a man who will split a hair at economy. He tries to make a record with his superiors for economical administration, and he does it at the expense of the employes. Now I am not saying this in my own behalf, because I have a kind of a job that is not in much danger. I get a good, fair salary, and am not kicking for more. But I know what has happened in the case of scores of good men who have worked up in the company. The company has kept a few still they were drawing $50, $60 or $70 a month, and then dropped them without cause, except that their places might be taken by cheap men who can be hired at any time for $35 a month. That is the kind of a thing which makes the men sore, and makes them abuse the company when it spends $25,000 in alleged benefactions, but which is really spent to advertise the company. If the company hires cheap men, it will get cheap service, and turkeys won't help the situation a bit."

It is of course impossible to determine how large a proportion of the men feel on the subject like the employe who is quoted above. It would be unhealthy for them to express their sentiments in public. The rebellious talk is all between employes who consider themselves aggrieved.

People in general have come to consider the Wells Fargo company as one of the ideal corporations of the country. It has apparently always been striving to retain the good will of its employes. It supplies them with books from a free circulating library, delivering and taking away the books without charge. It distributes free Thanksgiving and Christmas dinners. It is now planning a distribution of large silver medals, costing over $1 each, in commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of the company. Every employe of the company is to receive one of these medals free of charge, simply as a souvenir of the anniversary occasion.

A REQUIEM MASS

For the Souls of Filipinos and Boers Who Died Fighting.

New York, Nov. 26.—Rev. Joseph F. Hendl, rector of the church of the Immaculate Conception at Montclair, N. J., announces that at 8 a. m. Thursday he will celebrate a high mass of requiem for the repose of the souls of the Filipinos who died fighting for the rights of their country," and the Catholics who have been slain fighting with the Boers in South Africa.

Father Hendl said the mass was intended as a tribute to those who had died in the defense of their homes and families. It is also in the nature of a protest, he said, against the acts of both the American and English governments.

Seventh District Postoffice Fight.

There is a postoffice row down in the Seventh district, but it isn't anything of Congressman Long's doings, but there is danger of its making him trouble, just the same. A. H. Wallace, postmaster at South Haven, Sumner county, was removed on charges, the principal one of which was that he failed to deliver the Wellington Voice, ex-Superintendent Stryker's paper, to subscribers. J. P. Faurat was appointed to succeed Wallace, but now the citizens of South Haven have become stirred up and are demanding that Wallace be reinstated. They threaten to take the fight into county and congressional politics if Faurat's appointment is insisted on.

IN HONOR OF BURNS.

Scottish Society Preparing to Celebrate Birthday of Scotch Bard.

The members of the Scottish society of Topeka are already making plans for the celebration of the anniversary of Burns' birthday here on January 25.

The society has inaugurated a series of monthly meeting to be held at the residences of the various members of the society, at which time programmes of interest and appropriate to the time will be prepared and given. The first one will be held on the evening of December 6, at the home of James Cuthbert, at 218 Clay street. The second event will be on January 25, and will be held at the hall of the society. The members of the society met Saturday night at the office of Judge John Guthrie to complete plans for the December meeting and take preliminary steps in arranging the Burns anniversary celebration.

AT THE PLAY LAST NIGHT.

Frederick Warde drew a miserably small audience to the Crawford last night at $1.50 to see him in an old-fashioned melodrama affair from the French of D'Ennery, author of "The Two Orphans," entitled "The Mountebank."

"Mountebank" is the centuries old and polite, unabridged title for "grafter." Mr. Warde might be good in some plays and some players might be better than Warde in the part of the wandering mountebank, but no one could be dazzling in the part, as there is nothing to it. Those who have seen Warde in such roles as "Virginius" were sorely disappointed last night when they saw him meander through the listless "me wife, me child" lines from the "Two Orphans" play factory in France. The audience which saw Mr. Warde did not blockade the stairway in getting in or out of the theater, and the cash drawer in the box office was not full to overflowing by any means. Mr. Warde's company was fairly good in spots, and might appear to better advantage in a better vehicle. In the supposed to be emotional passages through which Mr. Warde trod the stage in sore distress, the audience looked on in stolid silence.

It will take Mrs. Moore over a month to make the trip.

Profit by a citizen's experience.

MRS. A. VONWOLF, of 2024 Buchanan street, says: "I overtaxed myself and brought on severe backache. At first I paid little attention to it, thinking it would pass away in a few days, but instead it grew worse. When I exerted myself or caught a slight cold I was sure to suffer from severe pains in my back, especially at night when my rest was much disturbed. I finally became so bad I could scarcely attend to my work. Coming to the conclusion that the trouble originated in my kidneys, I procured a box of Doan's Kidney Pills at Rowley & Snow's drug store, and commenced their treatment. They acted like magic. A few doses benefited me and before I had taken all the pills in one box the pain in my back disappeared."

BISHOP HOLDS THE BAG.

He Did Not Trade With Harvey Giffin but He Loses.

To the Editor of the State Journal.

In the paper of November 25, an article is published stating that H. A. Bishop traded to Harvey Giffin a grocery stock worth $53 for 12 acres of land and seven milch cows. In first place, it is not true that there were 12 acres but 10, and in the second place, I never traded a grocery stock to Mr. Giffin. Swift & Ertle, of Tenth and Monroe street traded a stock of goods to Mr. Giffin, and I bought the cattle and land of them. They made me a party to the suit because I have some property. I traded 160 acres of land to Swift & Ertle for the 10 acres and seven cows. So I lose 160 acres of land, and my share of the costs. I will pay $1,000 to anyone who will prove that this statement is not true. H. A. BISHOP.

Clifton's Labor Trouble.

The city of Clifton is having trouble over the eight hour law. The city is building its own waterworks, and has been paying its laborers at the rate of 15 cents an hour, but letting them work ten hours a day. The city council now finds that it must make up the extra amount to its laborers.
