"Rah, 'Rah, 'Rah, Nineteen four, 'Rah and roar, Nineteen four."

These are a sample of the yells which disturbed the echoes of the Washburn chapel when it was officially declared that the freshmen had successfully carried their cakes into the chapel, last evening.

Early in the evening the crowd began to gather at the college. The stairway leading from the south side of the hall into the chapel was guarded by girls, loyal sympathizers of either the "freshies" or the haughty sophomores.

Outside where the game was sure to be the roughest the boys of the upper classes were anxiously awaiting the coming of the "freshies" to get up the steps and walking here and there watching for any sign of the invaders.

Shortly before 8:30 there was a rush and a swirl and the "freshies" three abreast, closely packed made a dash for the entrance to the chapel.

The crowd held its breath. The "freshies" met the sophos just at the foot of the steps and all went down in a heap.

No Other Person Has So Wide An Experience with Woman's Ills, Nor Such a Record of Success. "A Woman Best Understands a Woman's Ills."—Her Advice Led Miss Farrell to Health.

Examination by a male physician is a hard trial to a delicately organized woman. She dreads the humiliation of it all. She therefore puts it off as long as she dares, and is only driven to it by fear of cancer, polypos, or some dreadful sickness.

"I take pleasure in writing you a few lines thanking you for your advice. I did just as you told me in taking your medicine, and owe my life to you. You are like a mother to your sex. I was awful sick, was all run down, and fell sick all over. I looked like a person brought out of the grave. My face was as white as the driven snow. I was always tired after doing a little work, and would have to sit down. I had terrible pains and headaches, and my appetite was not good; also, troubled with shortness of breath. I could not go up one flight of stairs without being tired and having to stop to get my breath. I was feeling just as miserable as could be. I took two bottles of your Vegetable Compound, and cannot express my thanks to you for what your medicine has done for me."

MAY MEAN CHURCH WAR.

Probable Outcome of Von Buelow's Appointment. New York, Oct. 20.—It is stated in high church circles in Washington, says a dispatch to the World, that the appointment of Count von Buelow to minister of foreign affairs of Germany, promises to revive controversies between the Vatican and the German emperor.

Two stories explanatory of this are told. One is that Italy objected to a member of the triple alliance taking so open an interest in the sovereignty, spiritual or temporal, of the pope as to appoint an ambassador to him. The other story is that Count von Buelow was indiscreet in permitting his emperor to believe that the pope acquiesced in the German protectorate of the Holy Land.
