"County Court Day."

"Man never is, but always to be blessed." This is a largely true of a municipality. Some of the civic organizations in Lexington are protesting against "County Court day." On the contrary the Boosters' Club at Paducah is trying to work up a sentiment for a bigger "County Court day."

Now "County Court day" of itself is a very ordinary affair wherever and wherever the County Judge hears motions and petitions of various kinds, appoints guardians and road overseers and transacts a variety of business incident to local government and legal procedure. The number of persons interested in an ordinary court session of the sort is small, but in Lexington and in many of the smaller towns in Kentucky "County Court day" is a sort of a general holiday in which the residents of the rural districts flock to town to swap horses, to buy or sell produce, to lay in supplies, to exhibit their live stock, to meet the candidates, to mingle with their friends, to eat a town dinner, and, maybe, to "take a cup of kindness"—if it comes handy.

There are some cities and towns where "County Court day" does not arise to the dimensions of a gala event. In Paducah, for instance, no one outside of the corporation goes to county court unless he happens to have business with that tribunal. "County Court day" does not create a ripple and there are few who know or care of its coming or its going. There are other county towns near Paducah, where, as in Lexington, "County Court day" is a time-honored institution which brings visitors from far and near, which fairly depopulates the rural districts for the time being and which temporarily transforms a sleepy village into a bustling and seething mart.

Some of the aesthetic citizens of Lexington do not like "County Court day" because of its much noise and manifold distractions. Also it litters up the streets and the clearing of the wreckage it leaves behind is a task of no small proportions. The boosters in Paducah, however, look at the question in a different light. "County Court day" makes business for the merchants and this, to their commercial vision, covers a multitude of faults. They are willing to hire extra policemen and street cleaners if they can induce the honest farmer to come to town and spend his money—and they don't care if he brings his ox, his horse, his prize pig, his bull yearling or his "hou" dawg," along with Betty and the babies and the hired man.

Corporations in the collective are a good deal like human beings in the first person singular. Whether "County Court day" is a relic or barbarism or an honorable and desirable institution depends largely on the point of view.—Courier Journal.

Makes the heart grow fonder, we're told, but a good portrait of the absent one will keep the recollection of the absent one more vivid—and comfort many a lonely hour of separation.

Lifes Journey.

When we start out on a vacation trip we feel assured that there will be a home coming. Often we buy a return ticket so certain is our expectancy of getting back-home again. How many of us have a return ticket? In infancy of life there is no return trip. In the voyage of life the train seems to go on and on. Truly there is a break in the journey at the end of the cars as it were, and then we continue to proceed on our great journey.

In youth we look forward impatiently to the time when manhood shall be reached and freedom from restraint. The time passes all too slowly, the months seem like years. We fear we shall not reach the distant harbor soon enough. But when age creeps upon us we would fain purchase a return ticket to carry us back again to the happy days of childhood when life seemed like one long holiday. When we take a short traveling trip our train is slow, stopping at all stations but when we cross the continent we take a fast train. In the voyage of life the train seems to go faster and faster, the farther we proceed, until during the latter years the stations fly by as swiftly as telegraph poles were passed early in the trip.

Probably the centuries of the eternal life will pass by as quickly as the years pass during the latter part of the earthly journey.—Ex.

Gov. McCreary Will Announce

The following press dispatch was sent from Frankfort Saturday:

That Gov. McCreary is preparing to announce next week his candidacy for the Senate in August primary was concluded today by following the statement of Representative Elwood Hamilton, of this county, who was called into conference with the Governor.

During the conference Gov. McCreary told him that he had received pledges of support from Rufus Vansant, of Ashland, chairman of the Democratic State Central and Executive Committee; also from Judge A. W. Young, of Mt. Sterling; W. F. Blair and Senator Thomas Coombs, of Lexington; Congressman Campbell Cantrell, of Georgetown, and many others.

It was reported that Gov. McCreary had offered the management of his campaign to Representative Hamilton, but Hamilton denied the report.

Handed Hot One.

They are telling a good story on one of Gov. McCreary's recent appointees to the office of county judge. The new official, according to the tale of his friends, went to the court-house and presented himself before the circuit clerk. After proudly flashing his commission from the governor, the new appointee said: "Well, here's my commission, and I am ready to be sworn in and to qualify as county judge."

"You had better come; this is to be no amateur performance." "You had better come; this is to be no amateur performance." "You had better come; this is to be no amateur performance."

The Hen Business.

Just the hen part of the farm business is a bigger thing than the steel trust. Last year the gross income of the steel trust was $700,000,000. But the gross income of farmers last year from poultry and eggs was $720,000,000—$20,000,000 for eggs alone.—Farm and Fireside.

It is an acknowledged fact, too, that by far the largest part of the work in raising and marketing the products of the poultry yard is done by the farmers' wives.—Editor.

Sure "Some" Democrat.

There are already a dozen or so candidates for the democratic nomination for jailer of Mercer county with some precincts yet to hear from, says the Louisville Times. Enoch Burton, one of the aspirants, is injecting some gaiety into the contest along original lines. On his campaign cards, which show him in the art of felling a tree, Mr. Burton has had printed the following lines:

"I am a Democrat bred
And a Democrat born
And when I am dead
There'll be a Democrat gone!"

"Mr. Bob" will be at the Opera House, this city. Dates given later. 25-11

Dix River Power Plant Assured.

O. P. Kennedy announces that the Dix River Power Plant Co. has been capitalized in New York at $1,000,000. The proposition to erect a monster dam across Dix river eight miles north of Danville has been under way for several months. A scientific test of the daily power of the water has been made and has proven satisfactory to the promoters.

Mr. Kennedy owns the land upon which the dam is to be erected. Options have already been secured on all property which would be affected by the back water. The dam will cost $1,400,000. The plant now seems to be a certainty, and in the event of its erection power will be furnished for the electric light plants in Lexington, Nicholasville, Danville, Lancaster, Richmond and Harrodsburg, with the possibility of a network of interurbans south of the Kentucky river.

Announces For Chief of Police.

Eisenhower in the Climax appears the announcement of Mr. Dave Powers for chief of police of the City of Richmond, subject to the action of the Democratic party. Mr. Powers is too well and favorably known to the readers to this paper to need an introduction at our hands. He has served on the police force of this city for a number of years and is fully acquainted with all the duties of the office. He has always affiliated with the Democratic party and has been one of its most faithful workers, and his numerous friends will be pleased to learn of his candidacy. If elected to the office, Mr. Powers pledges to discharge the duties involved without fear or favor, and solicits the support and influence of every Democrat in the city.

Novel Invitation.
A man who had been twice married and who was just arranging to take his third, wife, herself a two-times widow, over in Pawhuska, Okla., last week in sending out the invitations wrote on the bottom of them as follows:
"You had better come; this is to be no amateur performance."

Pure Shoe Law.

Examinations show that in nearly every manufactured shoe there is more or less paper and other materials than leather in the make-up. This is especially the case in the cheaper grades, and, as usual, those who can least afford it get the worst of it. They buy shoes which neither wear nor keep out the water, and colds and pneumonia are added in the money loss of the purchasers. To remedy this evil, the people of Louisiana agitated the question of a law to rid the State of the sale of such shoes and it was finally passed, providing for "pure shoes." That is to say that no shoes could be sold in the State, under a heavy penalty, which were not entirely of leather, unless the fact that other materials are used and an analysis is stamped on the sole. At first the idea of a pure shoe law was ridiculed by the press, but Louisiana's experience has proved beneficial, and other States are thinking of adopting such a law, which seems necessary to put the swindling shoe manufacturer's out of business.—W. P. Walton in Lexington Herald.

The Horse in New York.

Visitors at the recent automobile show in New York City did not, of course, take it upon themselves to head searching parties for horses, nor were any of them heard to exclaim, "My kingdom for a horse," but had these extreme measures been adopted, it is very doubtful if a bar-load of equines could have been found in any one day of the convention on any single block near the Garden. Some rather astounding figures are sent out of New York and London concerning the passing of the horse. In fact, in these two cities he seems almost to have passed; and what is happening in them, or has happened, in a small way is going on in the smaller places.

Records in New York show that nearly ten thousand motor trucks and delivery wagons are in use daily and the license office shows that this number gains in larger proportions each day. One of these trucks does the work of three horse-drawn wagons, as has been proven. Within the last year the taxicab has practically displaced the old-fashioned cab in most all cities and towns, but the inroads the motor has made into heavier kind of work has not been so noticeable until the last year or two.

London has about ten thousand motor cabs in operation and so complete has been the installation of this service that a movement has actually been started to induce the British Museum to buy a "hansom" and store it away before that type of vehicle becomes obsolete. Now the Public Service Commission of New York has finally voted to withdraw its last remaining horse street cars, which were used on one or two side streets for years after the horse car had faded from all other parts of the hemisphere.

"Old Lobbin'" seems passing from bondage and abuse and since he has been man's best friend, there is justification for sentiment that waits his being supplanted by a mechanical substitute, though the machine serves man's needs best.

Burley Society Sued For Alleged Back Taxes.

The Burley Tobacco Society, which was merged into the Burley Tobacco Co. two years ago, was sued in the Fayetteville circuit court for alleged back taxes for four years on property valued at $3,730,000 by Lewis Appert, of Mt. Sterling, attorney for State Revenue Agent John Howard.

DEATHS.

Mrs. Lizzie Shidell Park, wife of Chas. Park, died at her home in Kansas City, Mo., on January 24, 1913. She is survived by her husband and three children—Claude, Fannon and Margarie.

Mrs. Ella Parke died at the home of her sister, Mrs. Albert Doster, near this city, on Jack's Creek pike, Sunday afternoon. Her death was a great shock to her family and friends, but did not come as a surprise. She had been ill for many months previous to her death and it was known that she could not recover. She was 33 years of age and was born and raised in this county. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Ford and was married to Horace Parke in 1890, and to them were born two children, Birtley Parke, of this county, and Miss Viola Parke, of Lexington. Her remains were interred in the Richmond Cemetery Monday afternoon.

Mrs. Maggie C. Ferguson, widow of the late Robert M. Ferguson and a sister of Mr. Charles E. Clay, of this county, died on Thursday afternoon, January 16, at St. Joseph Hospital, Lexington, of heart failure. She had undergone an operation just a week before and was improving so rapidly that all thought of danger had disappeared, consequently the shock to the family was very great.

The funeral was held on Tuesday afternoon, January 22 and interment was in the Lexington cemetery. Mr. C. E. Clay and wife, Rev. S. J. Clay, of Anderson, Mo., and Rev. B. F. Clay, of Homedale, Idaho, were present. It was impossible, however, for the remaining brother, H. C. Clay, of Caldwell, Idaho, to be present.

At almost the exact hour that the funeral of Mrs. Ferguson was being held, the only living sister, Mrs. Annie Perce, of Denton, Texas, passed away. The telegram reached the three brothers in Lexington shortly after their return from the cemetery.

Both of these sisters were members of the Christian Church and were widely known for their lovely characters, their simplicity of nature, and the sympathy of friends and relatives was quickly tendered the family in their doable bereavement.
