The CITIZEN.

 The Days Work.

On the way, the wife.

The wife has been told that she is to have a baby. The husband is taking her to the hospital. The baby is expected to arrive in the next few hours. The family is excited and happy about the upcoming arrival of their new addition.

The Sturgis Wager

By EUGENIUS MONETTE.

CHAPTER II—Continued.

Mr. Sturgis was not the type of man who would be easily subdued by any argument. He believed in the power of logic, and was not afraid to use it. However, he was not immune to error, and sometimes even the best will make mistakes. For instance, when he was discussing the matter of the wager with Mr. Duff, he admitted that he might be wrong. This was a significant admission, as it showed that he was willing to admit his mistake, even if it meant losing the wager.

The ad breaker.

The ad breaker was not particularly impressed by Mr. Sturgis, or his arguments. He was more interested in making money, and was not concerned with the legality of his actions. In fact, he was willing to take risks to make a profit. This was a common practice in the advertising industry, and it was not uncommon for advertisers to resort to such tactics to gain a competitive advantage.

The police.

The police were called to the scene of the crime, and were able to gather evidence to support their investigation. The evidence was then turned over to the police for further examination.

The result.

The result of the investigation was that Mr. Sturgis had indeed made a mistake, and that he was responsible for the loss of the money. He was subsequently charged with the crime and taken to court.

The end.

The end of the Sturgis Wager was a lesson to all in the world of advertising: mistakes can be made, but they can also be corrected. It was a reminder that the best intentions can sometimes lead to unfavorable outcomes.

HEALTHY WOMEN.

Miss J. A. Randles, Manager of the Public Health Office, was a guest of honor at the Annual Banquet of the Women's Hospital Association. She spoke at the dinner, and was taken to luncheon by the Women's Hospital Association.

MURPHY WAS MUCH PUZZLED.

Mr. Murphy was much puzzled. He could not understand what was going on, and was not sure what to do next. He was left with questions, and was not sure how to proceed.

Painful Periods

are overcome by Lydia E. Pindall's Vegetable Compound.

Painful and ugly woman lasts only in grateful letters to Mrs. Pindall.

Deploration is a woman's avocation for a woman's vitality. It is fatal if properly continued. It is fatal if properly continued. It is fatal if properly continued. It is fatal if properly continued.

Evidence shows that Mrs. Pindall's advice on the subject of deploration has been many years before her advice on the subject of deploration.
