RIOT IN OHIO.

Paulding Reservoir Blown Up With Dynamite.

COLUMBUS, O., April 27.--The long expected outbreak over the Paulding reservoir began last evening. The following telegram which reached Governor Forsaker to-day explains the situation:

"Two hundred men marched to the canal in a body, captured the guards and held them in confinement until daylight. They worked all night on the front and rear of the reservoir, cutting the ground enough to let the water out. Then they poured coal oil on the lock and the keeper's house, burning it up.

Another telegram from Defiance, signed by C. A. Flickinger, conveyed the same information and asked protection. Similar telegrams came from Frank Eagle and L. B. Fesslee, the latter saying that effective measures should be taken to preserve the state property and the public peace.

The governor has issued the following proclamation: "Now, therefore, I, Joseph B. Foraker, governor of Ohio, do hereby call upon all said rioting and evil disposed persons, to desist at once from their unlawful actions, and to disperse immediately to their homes; and I hereby warn them that failing to do so, they will be immediately compelled to such a course, so far as the protection, repair and preservation of public property of the state is concerned.

There were repeated threats by Paulding people that they would destroy the reservoir with dynamite, and there have made their threat good. However there is now no fear of any serious outbreak from now on.

A RAVING MANIAC'S DEED.

HE ATTEMPTS TO MURDER HIS WIFE AND CHILD.

Falling to Fully Accomplish the Brutal Act, He Nearly Severs His Head With a Butcher Knife--A Similar Crime Committed in the Same Vicinity Recalled.

CINCINNATI, April 27.--The sight of a woman leaning from the second story window of No. 418 Sycamore street, with the blood flowing from two gashes in her head this morning at 5 o'clock, conveyed to the horror-stricken neighbors but a slight idea of the terrible tragedy which had been enacted within, and the still more terrible one which had been attempted at the same time, but which fortunately failed.

Last summer Heile began to show signs of softening of the brain, and grew so bad that he lost his situation. His father sent him to Michigan with his brother, where, after spending a couple of months in traveling, he returned to this city, apparently greatly improved in mind and health.

This morning at 4:30 Mrs. Heile was aroused by the peculiar actions of her husband, who was pacing the bedroom floor in an agitated manner. He appeared to be seeking something. She sought to calm him, but her efforts only appeared to infuriate him, and render him a raving maniac.

The poor woman made an effort to reach her sleeping child and carry it in safety beyond the reach of its crazed father. He chased her from the room, however, and turned toward the child. She rushed in and tried to grasp his arm, but he was too strong for her, and aiming a murderous blow at her head the weapon striking the back of the head, cutting the scalp open to the skull from which the blood spouted out.

Throwing open the window above the sofa on which the child reposed Mrs. Heile screamed for help. Her screams appear to have aroused Heile to his senses somewhat. He hesitated, dropped the hatchet and fled to the kitchen, appearing in the bedroom a moment later with a huge broad or butcher knife in his hand.

Coroner Rendigs was called and viewed the remains. He also examined Mrs. Heile's injuries, and pronounced them not necessarily fatal to herself, but regards her condition as dangerous because of her advanced pregnancy.

The attempted murder of Mrs. Heile bears a striking similarity to that committed by Hartnett, who, while laboring under a spell of insane jealousy, murdered his wife with an ax in a house just one square up the side of the hill back of Heile's residence, and at precisely the same hour of the morning, and also in the presence of his children. Hartnett, however, made no attempt at suicide but was captured and hung for his crime.

PERISHED IN THE FLAMES.

A Dreadful and Fatal Fire Disaster in Pittsburgh--The Victims.

PITTSBURGH, April 27.--One of the most disastrous fires in this vicinity for some time broke out this morning in Willis Brothers grocery, corner of Lacock and Corry streets, Allegheny City, entailing loss of life, besides injury to several people and the destruction of considerable property.

Shortly after 1 o'clock Mrs. Willis was awaked by a crackling noise and the smell of smoke. Arising she saw sparks coming up the elevator in the rear portion of the building. At once she alarmed the inmates and at the same time people on the outside discovered the fire and gave the alarm.

The smoke was thick and hung through passages and hallways in clouds so dense that a lantern gave no light; to open a window from one of the ladders thrown up against the building was to meet a cloud of suffocating vapor, but into it all both firemen and policemen plunged. Some fell and had to be dragged out, but they managed to push on until the third floor was gained, and the work of rescue was begun.

One of the most appalling incidents of the fire was the jumping off by two of the people from the building while the firemen were fighting their way up stairs, and an awestruck crowd stood on the streets gazing up at the burning building.

The fire was the jumping off by two of the people from the building while the firemen were fighting their way up stairs, and an awestruck crowd stood on the streets gazing up at the burning building. William Eberman appeared at the window on the third floor. He was too far gone to shout, but he was seen, and the crowd yelled to him to hold on. A ladder went up and a man hastily started to help the suffering man.

One of the Greeks, Hoggitzrun, a powerful, well built man, was the other victim. His room was on the fourth floor. The bravery of a man in the crowd probably saved his life. The Greek had pinned himself on the sill, looked at the flames behind and the pavement below, and then made one wild spring from the sill.

The injured, Eberman and the two Greeks, were removed to a hospital, where they are now resting easy. It is feared, however, that Eberman and Hoggitzrun will not recover. The fire is supposed to have been caused by an explosion of natural gas. The loss is $30,000, covered by insurance.
