Get a Start On Catarrh

And Save Endless Suffering Which Winter Brings.

The most offensive of all diseases becomes more intense as cold weather approaches. In fact, many who have been under treatment for so long, and during the summer feel little discomfort from the disease, are almost persuaded that they have been cured. But the first chilling blast of winter proves that the disease is still with them, and as the winter advances, their Catarrh grows in severity. Those who have felt only a slight touch of Catarrh may be sure that only cold weather is needed to develop the disease. What appears to be only a bad cold will prove more difficult to cure than formerly, and will return with more frequency, until before long the disease is fully developed.

For years I suffered from a severe case of Catarrh, and took several kinds of medicines and used various local applications, but they had no effect whatever. I was induced to try S. S. S. (Swift's Specific) and after two months I was perfectly well and have never felt any effects of the disease since.

Those who get a start on the disease before the cold and disagreeable weather aggravates it, will find a cure less difficult. Catarrh increases in severity year by year, and becomes one of the most obstinate and deep-seated troubles. But it is equally important that the right remedy be given. All local applications of sprays, washes, inhalations, etc., can never cure Catarrh, for they do not reach the disease. Catarrh is in the blood, and only a blood remedy can cure it. Local applications only reach the irritated surface; the right remedy must be taken internally.

YOUR LOCAL PAPER.

Have You Any Idea of What It Has Done For You?

It tells the people much which you would like to know, but which modesty or necessity prevents you from telling.

If you and all your folks have been prosperous and fortunate in your affairs, the paper has boosted you all the way. If you have had misfortune, the paper asked for sympathy in your behalf.

This paper rejoiced when you rejoiced and wept when you wept. If you are a good and enterprising citizen, the paper will always be your friend and will back you in your enterprise and will help to find your business friends.

It tells you where to buy and where to sell. It tells of rogues to be avoided.

It tells you of current prices and prevents you from being cheated and swindled in 100 ways.

Finally, when you die, the paper will publish your obituary and will eulogize your faults and will recite the story of your good deeds.

All these things the local editor will cause his paper to do, but no one else in the world will do them or can do them for you even for love or money. The outside paper is a stranger to your life and world and is not at all interested in its improvement. Yet your local paper does all this free of cost to you.

ADVICE ON LETTER-WRITING.

Girls Should Not Write Too Often and Shouldn't Effervesce Upon Paper.

In writing to men, girls—especially girls past 25—don't say too much, and don't say it in many words. Men all have latent, latent cruelty under their waistscoats, and it all comes out when they get documents—over four pages long.

Don't use more than one "darling" per page, even to your fiancé. Gush if you must, when you are together, but don't effervesce upon paper. Why should you really?

If you hunger for warfare, write to your lover a sweet, loving postcard, directed to the office. Try it and wait.

No matter if he does want you to write every day—don't. A few days waiting for a letter from you will be a wholesome moral discipline.

Men do not date upon reproaches sent by mail. If you have just caught a man for anger against any of the poor species, manifest it by a golden speech. It is but silver, and will be a speech, are, in comparison, better metal.

Don't spend whole pages in effusions; that is epistolical. No man will read you in your correspondence; he will only read to "know" your "letter." That should be a single paragraph. Gentlemen need no such reminders.

If you receive a written reproach, especially of a man's after he has shown it to your best friend, you might thus be born, and make it her twin sister. Besides, it's silly.

A badly-spelled, repressed epistle is an unlovely witness against you. Men enjoy daintily worded and written letters—when they must read them at all.

Never expect a busy man to really distinguish himself in a letter—he won't. He is essentially a disciple of brevity.

A crafty woman will face powder and shot rather than give a worldly woman a documentary evidence of his courtship. He judges all women to be traitors until they prove otherwise. Wise are thou, O man.

Heavily-scented paper is vulgar, highly-dotted paper likewise, stamps of duty and must be avoided. Photographs not to be esteemed.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

MAN-OF-WAR RULES.

A Miniature Monarchy on Ship Board with the Captain on the Bridge.

The "ship's company" of a man-of-war is like a limited monarchy, in which the captain is the monarch, his power limited only by the Articles of the Better Government of the Navy of the United States; otherwise known as the articles of war, and the orders and regulations of the navy department.

With this restriction his word is law; his mandates must be obeyed to the letter by all on board.

The commissioned officers are the nobles, the aristocracy. Between them and the crew there is a social gulf as wide as that between a British peer and a shopkeeper. There is none but official communication between these two elements; yet the officer has the nobleman's solicitude for his people, and the men have a corresponding respect, loyalty, and oftentimes affection for their officers.

The burghers are the warrant officers—the boatswain, gunner, sailmaker and carpenter—all worthy, important men, entitled to the prefix "Mr." before their names when addressed by either superiors or inferiors.

The naval cadets or "middies" are the student class.

The crew represents the great body of the people. In it are found the representatives of nearly every trade. There are "yeoman," as they are technically termed, who are the clerks and storekeepers. The paymaster's yeomen keep record of and serve out the clothing and miscellaneous stores consumed by the ship's company; the ship's yeoman is the storekeeper for cordage, oil, canvas, hardware, and the like; the engineer's yeoman is the custodian for mechanic's tools, spare pieces of machinery, and general engineer's supplies. There are pharmacists, "bay men," nurses, electricians, carpenters, machinists, blacksmiths, boiler makers, painters, tailors, shipwriters, printers, bakers, and, naturally, the essentially nautical artisans, such as calkers, riggers and the like.—Farmer's Round Table.

Delays are Dangerous.

Many of our friends, or people whom you know of have contracted consumption, pneumonia or other fatal diseases by neglect of a simple cold or cough. Foley's Honey and Tar, a safe, sure and pleasant cough medicine, would have saved them. It is guaranteed.

CAUGHT BY THE CAMERA.

Photography Has Come to Be an Efficient Aid in the Detection of Criminals.

By both accident and intention, on numerous occasions, the art of the photographer has proved of immense utility in compassing the conviction of criminals.

An amateur photographer in Chicago cunningly concealed an automatic camera in the tapestried wall of his drawing-room, for the purpose of securing some reliable evidence as to the behavior of certain members of his household during his absence from home.

One moonlight night a burglar broke into the house by way of the apartment mentioned. In so doing, he disturbed the spring which set the hidden machinery in motion, and left an excellent photograph of himself upon the faithful camera, which, when produced in court, secured his speedy conviction.

In another instance a man who murdered his mother was arrested by the operations of the omniscient camera. The dreadful deed was committed in a forest, where a student of photography was at work. A particularly pretty glen was so admired by the artist that he took three copies of the scene. One of these, when duly developed and enlarged, portrayed the details of the terrible tragedy, and by its aid the culprit was brought to justice.

During the jubilee celebrations a well-known photographer in London took a number of street scenes of historic interest. In one of these pictures, where a vast concourse of people were assembled near St. Paul's cathedral, the camera revealed a pickpocket in the very act of plying his peculiar profession. An old detective, who afterward inspected the photograph, said that he knew the man well. He was badly "wanted" for frauds committed on the continent, but the officers were not aware that he was in London. A week later he was arrested.

A snap shot at a summer crowd on the sands of Margate came out so clearly that the knight of the camera showed it with satisfaction to a number of his friends. Among these was a Scotland Yard officer who discovered among the mass of faces the familiar features of a man whom he had been hunting for months. Taking the next train to Margate, he haunted the beaches until he sighted the fugitive and effected his arrest.

A Portsmouth photographer paid a professional visit to a large garden party at Southsea, where he took a group of fashionable visitors with salient success. During the process of development he observed that in the holly hedge behind the group a rather repulsive human face appeared. A fortnight later a lady purchased one of these photographs and made the same singular discovery, and ascertained that the face resembled the face of that of a man who had made a futile attempt to rob their house a few weeks prior to the party. The matter being mentioned to the police, the district was scoured, and the man—who was an old criminal—was arrested and imprisoned.

An Irish housebreaker in Belfast, evidently ignorant concerning the character of the camera, found his way one night into a photographer's studio, on burglarious thought intent, when a large photographic apparatus attracted his attention. More by accident than design, the camera had been left ready for use, and the artless manipulation of the machinery by the curious thief actually produced a picture of himself, which was afterward employed to bring about his conviction.—Chicago Evening News.
