

COL. D. R. MURRAY

Visits Hartford. Tells Civil War Stories to Members of Republican Office.

A distinguished visitor to Hartford last Friday was Col. Murray, of Hardinsburg. While here the Colonel was in the Republican office and we got him started on some Civil War stories. Here's one that he gave us. For some time Col. Murray's regiment was stationed at Hopkinsville and during that time a prisoner was taken and condemned to be shot as a spy. Col. Murray, then a subordinate officer, was ordered to take charge of the execution the next morning at daybreak. He loaded the guns of the firing squad, putting blanks in half of them and bullets in the rest. The men were stationed in what was then known as the old Boat House, because of its peculiar shape, and the condemned man was locked in one of the rooms of the old house. Everything was prepared for the execution and the hours slipped by. The Colonel was by no means enthusiastic over the job and dreaded it almost as much as the prisoner. Sometime during the night, however, some new evidence was introduced and he was ordered to stay the execution. He went to tell the prisoner of the good news. The mental picture, says Mr. Murray, is still visible. He opened the door and saw the man lying on his rude bed of straw, face buried in his arms, undoubtedly thinking of the fate which was to meet him upon the appearance of the sun, the birds and other things mercy. Colonel Murray broke the good news, the man sighed, turned over and said, "thank God." A few weeks ago Colonel Murray received a letter postmarked New York. He broke open the envelope, read the letter, and imagine the surprise of the ex-Adjutant General when he saw that it was from this same man whom he had been ordered to execute. The letter stated that the writer well remembered Mr. Murray and could still hear his voice announcing mercy. Colonel Murray was in Hartford once during the War and was near here a second time. On one occasion while riding at the front of his regiment with the Lieut. Colonel near Hartford they were met by a volley of shots. Mr. Murray was riding a spirited Kentucky horse which, being scared by shots, threw him. The men thought him dead but he was soon up again unhurt and a search was started for the enemy. The small woods ahead was searched quickly and carefully but not a man could be found. It was quite a strange incident as there must have been several men in the firing party. The Colonel thinks now that there was a cave somewhere in the woods and the Rebels fired and immediately sought refuge in the cave. Colonel Murray is a splendid type of Southern Gentleman, tall and graceful he moves about with the ease of one many years his junior.—Hartford Republican.

How Mr. Davis Got Rid of a Bad Cold.

"Some time ago I had a very bad cough," writes Lewis T. Davis, Blackwater, Del. "My brother, McCabe Davis, gave me a small bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. After taking this I bought half a dozen bottles of it but only used one of them as the cough left me and I have not been troubled since." Obtainable everywhere.

Nine-tenths of what the average man knows is of no earthly benefit to him.

ENDORSED AT HOME

Such Proof as This Should Convince Any Cloverport Citizen.

The public endorsement of a local citizen is the best proof that can be produced. None better, none stronger can be had. When a man comes forward and testifies to his fellow-citizens, addresses his friends and neighbors, you may be sure he is thoroughly convinced or he would not do so. Telling one's experience when it is for the public good is an act of kindness that should be appreciated. The following statement given by a resident of Cloverport adds one more to the many cases of Home Endorsement which are being published about Doan's Kidney Pills. Read it.

L. V. Chapin, Cloverport, says: "I was in bad shape with kidney trouble. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills recommended, I went to Fisher's Drug Store and got a box. One box cured me. I have had no need of a kidney medicine since." Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Chapin had. Meets Death by Drowning.

James Miller, of Owensboro, received a message from Bonham, Texas, recently, advising him of the death of his eight year old son, James P. Miller, by drowning.

According to information received by Mr. Miller, his son, with two companions, were skating on a pond near the town when they fell through the ice. All were drowned. The bodies were not recovered until several hours after, when their absence from home had been discovered.

Mr. Miller has many friends in Cloverport who regret to hear of this sad news.

CARE OF SHADE TREES

Method of Pruning and Treatment of Wounds to Prevent Entrance of Decay-Producing Germs.

The best time to attend to several important operations connected with the proper care of shade trees is during the late fall or early winter. This work may be done at this season of the year, however, when weather conditions permit.

Large dead, decaying, or unsightly limbs may be removed. The best way to do this is to saw one-quarter or one-third through the limb from the under side, at a point 6 inches or a foot beyond the point where the final cut is to be made. A second cut on the upper side should be made a half-inch or more back of or beyond the first one. The sawing on the upper side should be continued until the limb falls. The first cut on the under side is to prevent the splitting or stripping of the outer wood and bark as the limb falls, something which almost invariably happens when a heavy limb is removed by a single cut from the upper side. This leaves a stub several inches long which must be sawed off close to the trunk, or close to the larger supporting limb, as the case may be. The stub should be held in place until completely severed. The final cut should be made so that its surface will conform as nearly as possible with the shape of the supporting limb or trunk. No projecting stub or stump should be left, as this interferes with the rapid healing of the wound.

For a mild, easy action of the bowels, try Doan's Reguets, a modern laxative. 25c at all stores.
