

Guatemala Women in the Surf.

San Francisco Chronicle,

We landed at Champerco. Its thatched huts, sheltered by royal palms and surrounded by orange groves, presented the ideal tropical picture, which was well confirmed by the fervent, heat of the sun. Our curiosity being soon gratified, we strolled down the beach. Several hundred men, women maids, youths and flourishing in the foamy surf, the large majority of them being unencumbered by even so much as a linen collar.

"There's your bright bronzed maidens of the sun," exclaimed our poet in raptures.

"How about the sharks?" inquired a more practical traveler, when it was proposed that we join the bathers.

"Oh they won't touch you in the surf," a jolly tar replied. "I've never heard of anybody being hurt by a shark in the surf. They can't see in the surf."

Confiding in this pleasant theory we participated in the general enjoyment. The brown senoritas manifested no surprise or disapproval, and assumed no prudish airs. They laughed, shouted and plunged into the roaring breakers with as much indifference as though they wore the most elegant bathing costumes ever manufactured. The women of Central America are famous for beauty of form, which is due chiefly to the fact that they ignore those appliances of civilization that twist the paler sisters out of shape.

A young man and his sister were hired to teach a school in Clay county, Ky., in partnership, the young lady to teach the first half of the school and her brother the other. Very soon after the young lady began teaching, one of her largest male students became her "fellow," and in a very short time they married. Not long however, after they were married the young groom and another of the bride's students engaged in a little "knock down." Each of the offenders was brought before the fair disciple of the rod, was given an impartial trial, and the young groom was proven to be equally guilty with the other, and was given his choice of leaving the school or taking a whipping. He chose the latter; so his newly-made bride did herself fair justice in the use of the rod, gave her husband not a few stripes, and cutting the blood out in not a few places. Since then everything has passed off smoothly.

Madison Courier: Bill Hood, who formerly lived in this city, died at his home in Jackson county, near Seymour, recently, aged seventy years. Hood was a remarkable man in many particulars, and for strength was perhaps without an equal in the State thirty years ago. He was a teamster, and often while engaged in hauling rock would lift with perfect ease and place on his wagon flagstones that would require the strength of three ordinary men. When his team would stall in chock holes he would place his back under the axle of the wagon and boost the load out of the hole. When in his cups he was somewhat quarrelsome, and, conscious of his strength, would defy the officers of the law and their posesses. Upon more than one occasion the officers had to shoot and disable him before they could arrest him.

A man put his head and some stones into a bag, at Constantine, Mich., tied the open end closely around his neck, and leaped into a pond. The inference is he was drowned.

The annual revenue to the United States from applejack alone is in the neighborhood of $50,000, and about two-thirds of that is from Sussex county, N. J.
