FRIGATE BIRDS IN FLIGHT.

Their Amazing Power and Perfect Command of the Air.

The haunt of that remarkable creature, the frigate bird, is the southern ocean, where it makes its nest on some lonely coast or remote island. For that purpose it selects the Crozetts, Ascension or Kerguelen, along with booby gannets, "wide awake" terns, the beautiful boatswain birds or the queer kelp pigeon. It tears from the trees as it flies a few sticks and fabricates a rude platform on top of some bush or tree, or even upon a ledge of rock, and lays and broods over a single egg—all that it needs to produce in a situation so safe and so fiercely protected.

The frigate bird is large, its slender but powerful wings spreading at least four feet from tip to tip, while the body is no less than forty inches from the hook of the great beak to the tip of the long forked tail. The color is blackish, with purple and green gloss tints; the feet are black, the bill bluish, and the pouch, which is peculiar to the male and is inflated in flight, is scarlet, as also is a ring about the eye. The pouch indicates the close relationship of these birds to the pelicans, but their habits are more like birds of prey, and one good name for the race is man-of-war hawk.

On the wing they show perfect command of the air. Their flight is swift, bold and full of grace. They are apparently untroubled, keeping away from land for weeks at a time, soaring to enormous heights and descending with amazing speed. They can ride out a hurricane, scudding low and taking a reef in their wings, so as to expose only the largest quills to the gale. They are able to support themselves for long hours without apparent motion, and it is a beautiful sight to watch one of them floating overhead against the deep blue sky, the long forked tail alternately opening and shutting like a pair of scissors and the head swinging slowly from side to side, as if searching the horizon. Frigate birds feed on surface swimming fish, squids, crabs and young turtles.

Daddy's Bedtime

The Young Garfish's Odd Birthday Party.

THE children had a great fondness for any kind of a story about the water, so daddy suggested that he would tell them a story about the giant garfishes.

"What is a giant garfish?" Evelyn, of course, immediately asked. "They are enormous fishes. They are as large as alligators and are sometimes mistaken for them. They are as big around as the trunks of huge trees. And they are very proud of their size."

"One day one of the younger members of the family had a birthday and great preparations were made for it, as the garfishes are very fond of one another. They always make a great point of celebrating birthdays, and everybody in the family brings a present to the honored one."

"The lucky garfish, whose birthday it was, received a great many presents. He was given principally good things to eat."

"But what would have amused you more than anything else would have been to have heard the fond aunts and uncles and cousins all telling the garfish how much he'd grown, and that he surely was going to be a perfectly beautiful big fish. For you would have thought that they would not want to see him any bigger, for he was perfectly enormous as it was."

"They amused themselves at the party by dancing. Their dancing was the strangest you can imagine, for they were so big and took up so much room and splashed so that there was nothing in the slightest degree graceful about them. Of course they thought they were very good dancers."

"They had a dancing competition. The queerest thing possible! For all the fishes seemed to have thought up new and weird dances. They flopped about in most awkward positions and applauded one another madly. They knocked their fins together and said 'Bravo, bravo!'"

"The dancing competition was won by the fish whose birthday it was. That pleased the other fishes, too, for they thought it was only right that he should have all the attention that day."

"And, really, he was quite as deserving of the prize as any of the others."

"What was the prize?" asked Evelyn.

"You ought to try and guess," said daddy.

"Maybe it was a birthday cake," suggested Jack.

"Why, Jack, you're right," said daddy. "The fishes knew that they would award the prize to the birthday fish, and so they all took a great interest in the preparation of the cake, which was made out of rich sea foam, green and yellow seaweed, chopped up fine together and flavored with sea water juice."

COMEDY IN BATTLE.

Serio-Comic Incidents of the Zulu War in South Africa.

The following story is told of an incident that occurred during the Zulu war in South Africa, when an overwhelming force of natives was opposed to a little band of English marines. From the Zulu host stepped forth a warrior laden with an ancient firearm, which he calmly mounted on a tripod in the open, while the marines looked on, admiring his pluck and wondering much what he proposed to do. At last one jovial marine suggested that their photographs were about to be taken, and by common consent no shots were fired.

Having loaded his piece with great deliberation, the Zulu primed it, sighted it and, leaning hard upon its breech, fired. The recoil knocked him head over heels backward, while a great roar went up from the delighted marines. He sat up, looking dazed, and then, the amusement over, he and his countrymen charged and were annihilated by a volley from the steadily aimed pieces of the little band of marines.

During one of the many battles waged by the New Zealand Maoris against the British settlers the latter ran out of ammunition. At the moment when death seemed imminent a flag of truce appeared from the enemy's trenches and messengers came forward with a supply of cartridges to enable the white men to continue fighting.—Washington Star

The Spy and the King.

The following story is told of Louis XVIII, king of France, and Fouché, who had been at one time Napoleon's minister of police. After the Bourbon restoration the king asked Fouché whether he had set spies over him during the empire. Fouché admitted that he had. "Who was the spy?" the king asked, and he was informed that it had been the Comte de Blancas. "How much did he get?" continued the king. "Two hundred thousand francs a year, your majesty." "Ah, well," said Louis, "he was honest, then, after all. I had said."

An Important Point.

A city girl was taking a course in an agricultural college. After a lecture on "How to increase the Milk Flow" she rose for a question.

"How long," she blushing inquired, "must one beat a cow before she will give whipped cream?"—Judge.

The Fishes Had a Dance.

CHARTER

—OF THE—

Johnson-Grayson Lumber Company, Incorporated.

State of Louisiana, Parish of Caddo. Personally came before John D. Wilkinson, a notary public in and for said parish and state, duly commissioned and sworn, T. S. Grayson, whose postoffice address is Magnolia, Ark., H. H. Johnson, whose postoffice address is Haughton, La., and Herbert H. Johnson, whose postoffice address is Haughton, La., who stated and declared to me, notary, that, availing themselves of the Constitution and laws of the State of Louisiana, they have formed and constituted themselves and do by these presents form and constitute themselves, as well as such other persons as may hereafter become associated with them, into a corporation and body corporate and have adopted and ordained as their act of incorporation the following, to-wit:

ARTICLE I.

The name and title of this corporation shall be the "Johnson-Grayson Lumber Company, Incorporated," with its domicile at Haughton, La., and under said corporate name it shall have and enjoy succession for a period of fifty years, unless sooner dissolved, as hereinafter provided. All legal processes shall be served on the President, or in his absence on the Vice-president, or Secretary, at the office of the company.

ARTICLE II.

The purpose for which this corporation is formed and its objects are hereby declared to be, to manufacture, purchase, sell and dispose of lumber and timber, to acquire, own and dispose of timber and timber lands, and in connection therewith to own and operate saw mills, planing mills and machinery necessary in the manufacture of lumber and lumber products, and to own and dispose of both real and personal property as may be necessary in conducting said business.

ARTICLE III.

The capital stock of this corporation is hereby fixed at the sum of Six Thousand Dollars ($6000) divided into sixty shares of the par value of One Hundred Dollars ($100) each, and it shall commence business whenever 50 per cent of its capital stock is subscribed for, as provided by the laws of the State of Louisiana. Inasmuch as the payment for a part of its capital stock is to be made by a transfer to the company of certain property, a detailed list of the same, with the fair value thereof, is hereto attached and made part hereof.

ARTICLE IV.

The affairs of this corporation shall be managed and controlled by a Board of Directors, consisting of three stockholders, who shall be elected annually on the second Monday in July of each year at a stockholders' meeting called for that purpose, and who shall hold office for one year, or until their successors are elected and installed. Until the election in July, 1916, the following shall constitute the officers of this company, as well as its Board of Directors: T. S. Grayson, who shall be President, and H. H. Johnson, who shall be General Manager and Treasurer, and Herbert H. Johnson, who shall be Secretary. The Board of Directors shall exercise all of the corporate powers of this corporation, and may delegate the same, or a part thereof, to such officers and agents as they may deem best; and shall have authority to fill any vacancy occurring in said board by the election of a stockholder for the unexpired term.

ARTICLE V.

This corporation may be dissolved, or this charter may be amended by a vote of three-fourths of the stock voted at any meeting called for that purpose, in accordance with the laws of the State of Louisiana; and at each stockholders' meeting each share of stock shall be entitled to one vote to be cast by its owner in person, or by written proxy. Whenever this corporation is dissolved by limitation, or otherwise, its affairs shall be liquidated by one or more liquidators, elected by the stockholders, who shall perform such duties, and have such powers as the stockholders may deem proper.

ARTICLE VI.

No stockholder of this corporation shall ever be held liable for the contracts or debts thereof in any further sum than the unpaid balance due on his stock; nor shall any mere informality have the effect of rendering this charter null or of exposing any stockholder to any greater loss than his stock.

In testimony whereof the said parties have hereunto signed their names, and have set opposite each the number of shares of stock subscribed for by them, in presence of me, notary, and the attesting witnesses, on this, the 16th day of July, 1915.

T. S. GRAYSON . . . 30 Shares.
H. H. JOHNSON . . . 27 Shares.
HERBERT H. JOHNSON 3 Shares.
