THE DAILY PRESS.
New York, July 15, 1861.

The sentiments of the people were expressed at the meeting of the New England Hotel Association in New York, last evening, and the sentiment was that a popular opposition to the administration of the late Government had been seriously mismanaged, and that the Union should be restored to peace and prosperity.

The New York Times, in an editorial, says:—The administration of the late Government has been seriously mismanaged, and the Union should be restored to peace and prosperity.

The New York Times, in an editorial, says:—The administration of the late Government has been seriously mismanaged, and the Union should be restored to peace and prosperity.

The New York Times, in an editorial, says:—The administration of the late Government has been seriously mismanaged, and the Union should be restored to peace and prosperity.

The New York Times, in an editorial, says:—The administration of the late Government has been seriously mismanaged, and the Union should be restored to peace and prosperity.

The New York Times, in an editorial, says:—The administration of the late Government has been seriously mismanaged, and the Union should be restored to peace and prosperity.

The New York Times, in an editorial, says:—The administration of the late Government has been seriously mismanaged, and the Union should be restored to peace and prosperity.

The New York Times, in an editorial, says:—The administration of the late Government has been seriously mismanaged, and the Union should be restored to peace and prosperity.

The New York Times, in an editorial, says:—The administration of the late Government has been seriously mismanaged, and the Union should be restored to peace and prosperity.

The New York Times, in an editorial, says:—The administration of the late Government has been seriously mismanaged, and the Union should be restored to peace and prosperity.

The New York Times, in an editorial, says:—The administration of the late Government has been seriously mismanaged, and the Union should be restored to peace and prosperity.

The New York Times, in an editorial, says:—The administration of the late Government has been seriously mismanaged, and the Union should be restored to peace and prosperity.

The New York Times, in an editorial, says:—The administration of the late Government has been seriously mismanaged, and the Union should be restored to peace and prosperity.

The New York Times, in an editorial, says:—The administration of the late Government has been seriously mismanaged, and the Union should be restored to peace and prosperity.

The New York Times, in an editorial, says:—The administration of the late Government has been seriously mismanaged, and the Union should be restored to peace and prosperity.

The New York Times, in an editorial, says:—The administration of the late Government has been seriously mismanaged, and the Union should be restored to peace and prosperity.

The New York Times, in an editorial, says:—The administration of the late Government has been seriously mismanaged, and the Union should be restored to peace and prosperity.

The New York Times, in an editorial, says:—The administration of the late Government has been seriously mismanaged, and the Union should be restored to peace and prosperity.

The New York Times, in an editorial, says:—The administration of the late Government has been seriously mismanaged, and the Union should be restored to peace and prosperity.

The New York Times, in an editorial, says:—The administration of the late Government has been seriously mismanaged, and the Union should be restored to peace and prosperity.

The New York Times, in an editorial, says:—The administration of the late Government has been seriously mismanaged, and the Union should be restored to peace and prosperity.

The New York Times, in an editorial, says:—The administration of the late Government has been seriously mismanaged, and the Union should be restored to peace and prosperity.

The New York Times, in an editorial, says:—The administration of the late Government has been seriously mismanaged, and the Union should be restored to peace and prosperity.

The New York Times, in an editorial, says:—The administration of the late Government has been seriously mismanaged, and the Union should be restored to peace and prosperity.