

A FARMER'S SONG.
We envy not the princely man,
In city or in town,
Who wanders with pumpkin vines
Run up the hill, or down,
We care not for his marble halls,
Nor yet his wealth of gold,
We would not have his sordid heart
For all his wealth thrice told.

We are the favored ones of earth,
We breathe pure air each morn,
We sow—we reap the golden grain—
We gather in the corn;
We till—we live on what we earn,
And more than this we do,
We hear of starving millions round,
And gladly feel them too.

The lawyer lives on princely fees,
Till he drags a weary life,
He never knows a peaceful hour—
His atmosphere is strife.
The merchant thumps his yard stick o'er—
Grows haggard at his toil—
It's not the man God meant him for—
Why don't he till the soil?

The doctor plods through stork and cold,
Fleets at his patient's will,
When dead and gone he plods again
To get his lengthy bill.
The printer (bless his noble soul)
He grasps the mighty earth;
And stamps it on our welcome sheet
To cheer the farmer's hearth.

We sing the honor of the plow,
And honor of the press—
Two noble instruments of toil,
With each a power to bless.
The bone, the nerve of this fast age,
True wealth of human kind—
One tills the ever generous earth,
The other tills the mind.
