

CIVIL ENGINEERING.

Its Progress in the Nineteenth Century Has Been Truly Marvelous.

Mr. Charles Hawksley in his presidential address to the British Institute of Civil Engineers reviewed the progress of civil engineering in the nineteenth century, reports a London paper.

In 1819 the Savannah, propelled partly by steam, partly by sail, traversed the Atlantic in 26 days. In 1833 the voyage was made under steam alone and required 17 days.

Such are a few of the statistics of engineering progress during the century. They show a progress toward comfort and happiness is, more or less, a by-product of comfort, so that we have good reason to rejoice over these statistics, bold as they may seem.

TEETH IN WARFARE.

England's Experience in South Africa Shows Need of Dentistry.

After 21 months' fighting four dental surgeons have been sent to South Africa to attend to the teeth of the army.

In an army of a quarter of a million men there are four surgeons who have been kept tolerably busy. No soldier who has campaigned six months in Africa will, if he be wise, neglect a chance of having his teeth examined.

In the unequal struggle between trek and beseit on the one hand and mere human teeth on the other, not only the men of my company came through unscathed.

CANAL BOATS FOR MANILA.

Barges Shipped from the Erie Canal to Be Used on the Pasig River.

The easy-going native bargemen of Manila bay will experience something like surprise when a few months hence they see towed into their harbor 19 Erie canal boats.

Large steamers cannot approach within two miles of the shore in Manila bay. For this reason it has always been necessary to send out cascos, or lighters, in which the cargoes are transported up the Pasig river to the city.

SLIPPERY SIDEWALKS.

Some of the Curious Effects They Produce Upon Unwary Pedestrians.

Slippery sidewalks that have been the rule for the past few mornings have tended to bring out emphatically one of the peculiar sides of human nature.

If there happens to be some one near by who has witnessed the fall the snuff vanishes and there is a display of temper that is indignant. It is his hat that suffers.

MAIL IN A WHEELBARROW.

Queer Conveyance That Is Used by an Old Woman Carrier in Iowa.

Four times daily for 21 years summer and winter, in fair weather and foul, Lucinda Annie Robinson has trundled a wheelbarrow bearing the United States mail from the post office at Pleasantville, Ia., to the railroad, a mile away.

When her husband became a confirmed invalid she kept the contract for him, and nursed him, too, and at his death the government wouldn't take the job away from her.

"She is now 71, but she vows she'll carry the mail till she dies."
