ENTHUSIASM FOR GREAT MOVEMENT

SPLENDID MEETING OF MEN AND RELIGION FORWARD MOVEMENT AT Y. M. C. A. LAST EVENING.

Last evening's banquet, followed by a number of addresses at the Y. M. C. A., to further the cause of the Men and Religion Forward movement in this community, was largely attended about 300 being present. The gathering was a most enthusiastic one. All of the speakers were enthused, the conversation spread, and before the meeting was brought to a close, practically everyone present had pledged himself to become interested in one or more phases of the work. This was accomplished through means of cards which were passed among the audience just previous to dispersal.

The service at the banquet reflected credit on the ladies who took part, as well as the officers of the Y. M. C. A., who were instrumental in arranging the gym as a dining room. Banners and flags were the decorations. During the early part of the evening the Calumet high school orchestra rendered several selections very pleasingly, while two selections by the Calumet mixed quartette, composed of Mrs. Charles Thomas, Miss Mildred Romsdahl, Lou Hall and Joseph H. Pennett, also received hearty applause.

was present, and how enthused the members of that delegation were in the work of the movement. In conclusion he said he wished to make a personal appeal to them all to get out and do the work that had been cut out for them to do.

W. L. Clapp, of Milwaukee, was the next speaker. He said it had been his privilege to attend at least two meetings per week for the past several months in the interest of the movement, and wished to say that the present meeting and arrangements were second to none he had yet attended.

"Milwaukee is not famous for her religion," said Mr. Clapp, "but I want to say that she is fast reaching that place where she will be more highly regarded from a religious standpoint. Speaking of one of the phases of the movement, Evangelism, Mr. Clapp said it could be divided into three classes, the popular kind of evangelism, the parish kind, and personal evangelism. The Men and Religion Forward movement believes in all three," he said. "It is a physical, spiritual and mental impossibility for the preacher to do all of the Christianizing and evangelizing, and the laymen have begun to realize that they can help in this great movement. Laymen are doing it now, and winning souls to Christ."

The speaker referred to laymen's work in Milwaukee, where many had been brought within the fold of the church through their influence and earnest appeals. The time has come, he said, when it is easier to win souls than formerly. He urged his hearers to get into the work heart and soul.

W. H. Moulton, of Ishpeming, sociological worker for the Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Co., spoke a few words on "Social service." Mr. Moulton dealt with Calumet's Charities Bureau, and said his audience had some idea of what was being done locally through benevolent channels. He said he knew of no more honorable calling than that of working in the iron and copper mines. He spoke of the work of training the young people along physical lines. He also referred to the coming to the upper peninsula of hundreds and thousands of foreign speaking peoples, of the duty of teaching them the English language, American customs, citizenship, etc.

"I am glad that the Workmen's Compensation Act is being supported and advocated by the copper and iron mining companies of Michigan," said Mr. Moulton, "and hope that the bill will soon pass the legislature. We are already paying pensions. Today there is hardly any company but has the safety of its workmen insured, and I am glad to say that we are among them."

Mr. Moulton referred to Houghton county's tuberculosis hospital and visiting nurse, and added that a rest cottage was among the things his company had provided for the invalid and overhauling "social service," said Mr. Moulton, is a challenge to the men of Calumet. Are you ready to take it up?"

Rev. J. R. Curzon also spoke a few words in which he said that it was a great privilege to be back among his old friends once again. "This meeting," said Mr. Curzon, "showed that the work was not going to be lonesome."

Mr. Curzon spoke on "Missions," another phase of the work. He said it was one of the great means whereby souls were brought to Christ. Mr. Curzon said that any parish filled with missionary enthusiasm was bound to bring good results. He said they were pledged to follow the example of Christ, and like Him to give themselves, and spend themselves in His service, so that the whole world might be gathered to His breast. He said all are called upon to be leaders of men, and concluded by saying that when they came to cross the dark valley of the shadow of death, they would be enabled to look up and say, "Didn't I lead you through boys?"

B. H. Johnson spoke on "Bible study." He gave an illustration of the work that is being done in this channel by men and boys of the state of Michigan, quoting many facts and figures and personal observations to bear out his statements. "In the city of Detroit alone," said Mr. Johnson, "there are 1,000 men and boys weekly engaged in Bible study classes. He spoke of the Sunday schools in the country, engaged in Bible study having 3,000,000.

The Monitor, That Revolutionized Naval Warfare Fifty Years Ago, Was a Pygmy When Compared With Modern Battleship.

Fifty years ago today (March 9, 1862) the battle between the Merrimac and the Monitor was fought in Hampton Roads. This battle, which was not decisive so far as either vessel scoring a victory was concerned, revolutionized naval warfare and made every warship of that day obsolete. The little Monitor, which had been contemptuously referred to as a "cheese box on a raft," could have met and defeated any vessel belonging to the navy of any European power at that time. She was the forerunner of the modern ironclad, and yet she was a pygmy compared with the Dreadnoughts of today. The Monitor carried two 11 inch guns. They were of the smooth bore type, and each threw a solid shot weighing 150 pounds. These shots could be thrown perhaps a mile with little accuracy. Compare this armament with the Michigan, which has eight twelve-inch guns, each of which throws a projectile of 1,200 pounds a distance of ten miles with surprising accuracy; twenty-two three-inch quick firing guns, eight one-pounders and two torpedo tubes. The Monitor was built of wood, protected on the sides with five layers of iron, each one inch thick. The turret was built of eight layers of one-inch iron. The Michigan has an armor plate of steel from eight to twelve inches thick. The Michigan can fire a broadside fifty or sixty times as heavy as that of the Monitor.
