The employers who borrow in Chicago ask them with shovels now, give them picks, as they used to. They expect the men to provide their own shovels. The reason for this is that as soon as the men are given shovels some of them file off the corners of the shovels. They claim—and there is reason for their claim—that the shovel being more pointed enters the earth easier so that the digging is made less laborious, and this only is their reason—they wouldn't think of cutting down the shovel so that even if they threw out the same number of shovels a day they would be accomplishing less.

But at times they have a different reason for making their shovels smaller. If they think they are not being paid enough they will make a still further cut in the size of their shovels. This makes the work just as hard for them, the gang boss probably makes them throw out just as many shovels each day—although of course each load will be slightly lighter—but at the end of the day they will not have covered as many yards as they would have with the larger shovels. This is their way of getting even with their employer; they will work as hard as ever, but they don't want him to get as good results.

Ravenous Fish Eaters.

Dr. Francis Ward said in a lecture that of all the birds which preyed on fish the cormorant did the most damage. He had known a six-pound cormorant eat double or treble its own weight of fish in a day. Of aquatic mammals, the otter was the most destructive to fish, and also the cleverest fisherman in the manner it cornered its prey. The otter enjoyed fish-catching as a sport, apart from the necessities of hunger, and the lecturer had known three otters which together killed 2,000 trout in one night. Contrary to the general belief, the otter, several of which he had kept under observation, was not a dainty eater, and would eat the whole of a two-pound trout down to and including the tail-fin, and then go for another.

Ozone in Brewing.

A curious commercial application of ozone has just been developed in the brewing industry. Samples of brewers' yeast treated with ozone for five minutes show greater fermenting power than untreated yeast. During the first day or two there is no gain, but after that ozonized yeast exhibits fermentative power markedly in excess of untreated yeast. The benefit comes from the inhibitive action of ozone on objectionable organisms, and also because the weaker yeast cells are eliminated and the stronger ones stimulated in fermentative power. In the brewing industry the overproduction of yeast cells is a great source of loss.—Scientific American.

Bird and Snake Over Auto.

With a big copperhead in its claws, so heavy that it could hardly hold it, a hawk hovered for minutes over the heads of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Royler, driving in their automobile near Berwick, Pa.

The wriggling and venomous snake nearly struck the couple, and several times the hawk nearly dropped it into the automobile.

Keweenaw Bay Notes.

On Sunday, July 12, several of the local Grangers met at the home of Joseph Latendresse on the Sturgeon. The program, which was a little out of the ordinary, consisted of the erection of a log hay barn for Mr. Latendresse to replace one recently destroyed by fire. The portion of the program outlined for the "sisters" present was the preparation of a sumptuous spread, which was enjoyed under the lordly elms on the banks of the Sturgeon. So delighted were those present that many returned last Sunday to repeat the program and put a roof on the barn.

To give his new engine a try-out, Herman Rosenberg, accompanied by Norshy, Arnold and Adah Rowe, Ethel Yelp and Elva Cornish, took a run to White City Monday evening. All were pleased with the trip.

Charles Lokanari, of Calumet, moved his family and household goods here last week.

Wm. C. Birk, of Baraga, was a business visitor here Monday.

Messrs. Dwyer and Hoole, of Hancock, called on the trade here last week.
