A TIGHT SQUEEZE.

The Election.

The Democratic position was that the election was safe. The Republicans were equally as certain of victory. There was no doubt that the contest would be decided in the next thirty-six hours. The polls were opened early in the morning, and the voting went on without interruption until late in the evening. The Democratic candidates were expected to win by a large majority. The Republicans, on the other hand, were not sure of their victory. They were confident of success, but they were not sure that they would win by a large margin. The contest was hot and bitter, and the votes were counted by the thousands.

ENCOURAGING.

From the outside of the town.

The climate was hot and the people were tired. The sun beat down upon the town, and the heat was oppressive. The people were exhausted, and many of them were sick. The water was warm, and the people drank it to cool their bodies. The town was alive with activity, and the people were busy with their work. The streets were crowded, and the people were walking and talking. The town was full of life, and the people were happy.

REAL ESTATE.

The sale of real estate was brisk. The prices were high, and the buyers were eager. The sellers were also eager, and they were willing to sell at any price. The buyers and sellers were both happy, and the sale of real estate was a success.

MINNEAPOLIS EXPOSITION.

The exposition was a great success. The exhibits were admired, and the visitors were interested. The exposition was a great attraction, and many people came to see it. The exposition was a great success, and the organizers were pleased.

CITY NOTICES.

The city was alive with activity. The streets were crowded, and the people were busy. The city was full of life, and the people were happy.

FINANCIAL.

The financial situation was stable. The banks were solvent, and the people were safe. The financial situation was stable, and the people were happy.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

The President was in town. He was greeted with enthusiasm, and the people were happy to see him. The President was in town, and the people were pleased.

DOMESTIC.

The domestic situation was stable. The people were content, and the government was working well. The domestic situation was stable, and the people were happy.

FIRE İN THE CITY.

The fire was a great event. The people were shocked, and the city was in a state of disorder. The fire was a great event, and the people were surprised.

FOREIGN.

The foreign situation was stable. The people were content, and the government was working well. The foreign situation was stable, and the people were happy.

LOCAL.

The local situation was stable. The people were content, and the government was working well. The local situation was stable, and the people were happy.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 1881.

VOL. IV.

No. 234.