The Red Blood of Business.

Newspaper advertising is the red blood of business. It is the power that puts the merchants' goods into the homes of the people. It is a necessity in modern business methods. It revives a sluggish business and puts new life into the atmosphere. It goes into the homes of the people you want to reach—your home people—people who know you, and who know, when they read your advertisements in their home paper, that you are talking facts, and that you are on the premises to back up and make good every statement. They know you mean what you say, and you also know that they are governed in their purchases by the statements you make.

The World goes into the homes of practically every family in your city, and you know that most every adult member of the family is eager to read the local newspaper. In your home paper you can say whatever you wish, as much as you desire, and whenever you want to tell the people of your community that you have something fresh from the market, that will fill their wants or satisfy their desires. Your home paper is your partner in business. It works for you when you are sleeping and keeps you busy when you are awake. It is the medium thru which you can have a heart-to-heart talk with the people of your community and keep them informed regarding the commercial progress of the world, so far as it interests you and them. You may think that long residence in the community and your reputation for the square deal are sufficient; but the fact that you are an old resident and are well known is all in your favor as an advertiser; for the people who know you and admire your sterling qualities, will believe every word you say in your advertisements, and when you announce the arrival of new goods, or that you have such and such things to sell, it puts them in mind of the fact that they need or soon will need the very articles which you are offering, and they will go to you because you have advertised the things they need and want.

The better and more favorably a business man is known in his community the greater the value of advertising to him; for his announcements are backed by his good reputation.

The columns of The World are yours for the price. Let no out-of-town advertiser draw from you the business that is yours for the asking, and which will be yours if you keep the community posted on what you have to sell.—World' Ottawa, Kans.

Figuring on a Crowd.

In designing structures which are liable to be subjected to stress from crowds, engineers commonly figure on a dead load of about one hundred pounds to the square foot.

Tallest Spire.

The record is held by the spire of Norwich cathedral, England, which is 814 feet high. The original spire was destroyed by lightning in 1463, the present spire being about 450 years old.

Diamonds Used in Shipbuilding.

It is hardly to be imagined that diamonds have anything to do with the building of battleships. Yet this is so, for diamond dust is used for cutting and turning the tremendously hard steel which is used in the manufacture of modern armaments.
