MERRIAM BROWN, Lowell, Mass.

"Times are hard, Mr. Editor, and I must curtail expenses so you will please discontinue my paper," said a careful and economical farmer recently, and resolved of the awful burden of paying for a newspaper for his family he went out and invited four of his friends in to take the same as himself and the other two took cigars: expense, 50 cents, or three mouths subscription.

A Great University
BY ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND FIRE-SIDES.

A Man of letters, whose name we do not feel free to use without permission, writes about the current volume of St.
Nicholas, as follows:

"I never until now believed in the real existence of that much-talked-about "youth who bore," mid 'now and ice. A banner with this strange device, Exekisior."

You see, the poet does not give his name and place of residence, and this lack of particulars about so admirable a fellow is suspicious. But I have found him now, and his name is St.
Nicholas—the only young fellow I ever knew who kept on getting better and better all the time. This volume of St. Nicholas is about the best of all, and the Mar. h number especially is, as girls say, "just lovely." I am growing gray, and am old enough to have a grandchild at my knees reciting jingles from St. Nicholas, but I am not too old to appreciate such poems as the exquisite ballad of "Brier Rose," by Mr. Boyesen, in a recent number. This piece ought to have a place in all future collections of poetry for children.
Neither am I too old to laugh over the wonderful inventions of Phanton Rogers and his friends, and the "poems" of Jummy the Rhymer, nor too far gone in life to enjoy the pretty verses signed Bessie Hill. All my boyish interest in natural history and adventure is re-awakened by such articles as those called "In Nature's Wonderland," and
"The Giant Squid." But the March number is the climax. How charmingly good lessons are taught in "Mary Jane Describes Herself," and "Rabbits and Bank Paper." The "Monkey and his Company" and "Consistency" are irresistibly jolly (as is "The Miller of Doe," in the December number).
When I was a boy, I used to hear wonder in the country stores higgling to get the merchant to "throw in" something "to make the bargain good." By the plan of giving extracts from great writers, as well as by the instructions of Jack-in-the-Pulpit, and many other articles, St. Nicholas "throws in" a great deal of schooling along with the happiness it gives. "Young Prima Donna," and all such articles, give information as important as that contained in the multiplication table.
