WHAT has become of Voorhees's tariff racket? Has that too expired?

It must be a great comfort to the Democracy to feel that it cannot be whipped again for a year.

THE Virginia Bourbons are very despondent, and go about weighed down with a belief that the end of the world is at hand. This is sad. The only way by which they can cheer themselves up which occurs to us is to have that versatile old slang-wag Jugal Early send another challenge to Mahone.

It will be interesting to see what the Democrats will do with John Kelly now. They are probably able to see that the business of reading him out of the party cannot be a profitable one so long as he can take 50,000 voters out with him. He is more dangerous outside the party than in, and there is no other political course than to invite him back. He will not come on any second-rate terms. He is in position to be treated with extreme care, and is likely to find that no seat except a front one will suit him. The brilliant policy of conciliating him with a club has failed. Let us see if the Democratic leaders are able to invent any other policy which will be more successful.

DISMISSED.
The "infamous" against Brady and the rest in the Star Route cases has been dismissed by the court upon the ground that the offense charged comes under the term "infamous," and, therefore, under the Constitution, must be proceeded against by presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury. The proceeding by information hung between two stools—one the attempt to send a public officer to the penitentiary on the charge of conspiracy to rob the government, the other a plea that this is not an infamous crime. Between these two the case broke its back.

The "infamous crime," in the absence of judicial defining, must be taken in a moral and a dictionary sense, in which its turpitude, its ill fame, and what should be its ill fame because of its turpitude, are elements. The provision of the penitentiary—which is held an ineradicable disgrace, a lasting infamy—for an offense, seems to hold it an infamous crime. If exemption from being held for an infamous crime, otherwise than by presentment or by Grand Jury, be of any value, then it is better that Brady and the rest should be discharged from these crimes than that the Constitution should be strained in an attempt to convict them.

Brady gathered in such strong political influences, and so involved congressmen and Congress, and had so large a swing within the law, that it is doubtful if any jury which is likely to be had in the District of Columbia will convict him, anyhow; and this exceptional proceeding by complaint, instead of Grand Jury, would have been used to affect the minds of jurors if the trial had gone on in this form.

A blame for letting the time and the Jury slip by seems to be somewhere, and the government side is bandying it about from one to another. There is this grain of satisfaction in all this muddled affair, that the Star Route swindling has been cut down half a million a year. This is probably all that the government will realize out of these celebrated cases.

Mr. Michael McCann, a well known and popular manufacturer, of Syracuse, N. Y., writes: "I felt generally debilitated and my health failing me. I longed and prayed for an iron constitution, that I might be rid of the many annoyances of ill health. But dyspepsia and urinary troubles, attended by nervous prostration, had gotten hold of me and I thought my time had come. Nothing seemed to give me any permanent relief. Finally I happened to see an advertisement of Brown's Iron Bitters. Bless me, says I—that's just the medicine for me precisely." And so it was. By the powers of old Ireland, it has cured me of all my troubles and given me a constitution of iron.

HOLT COUNTY.

Its Location, Financial Condition and Inducements to Immigrants.

The richest and most productive soil in the world—Thomas H. Benton.
The most beautiful country I ever looked upon.—August Taylor.
Are you coming West? Come to Holt county where the atmosphere is pure, clear and bracing—where hundreds of people, from cities and elsewhere, throughout the east and south resort for health and pleasure, and take up their residence during summer's heated term.

Holt county is situated in the north-western corner of Missouri, and is the banner county of the famous "Platte Purchase;" is bounded on the north by Atchison and Nodaway counties; on the east by Nodaway and Andrew counties, and on the south and west by the Missouri River, which separates it from Kansas and Nebraska. It has an area equal to 46,434 square miles. The soil is alluvium; composed of layers of sand, vegetable mould and clay. Its fertility is absolutely unsurpassed, the average number of bushels per acre of the various products being as follows: corn, 86; wheat, 28; oats, 44; barley, 40; rye, 22; Irish potatoes, 329; Sweet potatoes, 300; turnips, 200; timothy, 2 tons; Prairie hay, 3 tons; Hungarian grass, 3 tons; millet, 4 tons; clover, 3 tons; hemp, 2 tons; tobacco, 1,000 lbs; Flax seed, 20 bushels. The best of water and the finest of timber, abound throughout the whole entire county. Also considerable coal, and building stone in abundance, can be found in all parts of the county.

No indebtedness hangs over the county to retard its progress, and it has a school fund exceeding $100,000 now on interest. It has eighty-seven organized school districts, besides a Normal School at Oregon, an Academy at Mound City, and a German school at Corning, employing, in all, one hundred and sixteen teachers.

Three railroads traverse Holt county in different directions and carry its imports and exports to and from its nine growing towns.

Fruit growing, as an industry, is a most profitable employment here. Fruit, grown in Holt county, is fast becoming known throughout the West, by its invariably having carried off prizes at the Fair. There are many farmers here whose annual income from apples alone amounts to from $600 to $3,000.

The annual stock product varies—in cattle from 12,000 to 20,000 head; and in hogs from 50,000 to 64,000 head. Several thousand horses and mules are sold annually, and sheep, being clear from all diseases here, thrive finely.

The population of the county by the last census was 15,510. Oregon, the county seat, has a population of about 1,300, and Mound City, near the county's center, has about the same number. The other towns are smaller.

Travel in any portion of Holt county is pleasant, and you will find comfortable and happy homes, good school houses, fine church houses, excellent roads and bridges, and as intelligent, industrious, frugal and plucky people as ever tamed a furrow or cast a vote.

Taxes are low, the prices of land range from $1.25 to $50 per acre, residences and business houses are being built, and evidences of thrift are seen on every hand.

With a climate as mild as California, a soil as fertile as that of Egypt, water as plenty as in New York, fruit as fine as in New Jersey, and THE COUNTY PAPER to give you the news, we invite you to Holt county. God made this country. His people are taking it as their heritage. It is not a lazy man's Paradise, but it is fast becoming the prudent man's Eden.

Come to Holt county.

WHY GIRLS SHOULD RECEIVE A PRACTICAL EDUCATION.

A girl's education should be as carefully attended to as a boy's. While a great many are not obliged to labor for their daily bread, as many or more do. If possible they should be prepared to fight the battle of life successfully. While studying they should make a specialty of what they fancy most, or rather what they have the most natural talent for. A great many scoff at female physicians, lawyers, editors, etc., but they should not. While I do not advise so public a life—one filled with as many hardships as any of the above named—still each and all are honorable and honest. If a girl's talent is for any of them, let her prepare herself thoroughly, and if adversity overtakes her she is prepared to meet it. Some prefer book-keeping, some teaching; some the lower callings in life. Whatever the preference may be, be thorough. No matter how lowly a station in life may be, if it be honest it is honorable. It does not make women any the less womanly to be well educated. On the other hand she understands all the better her duties in life, and performs them better. Allow me to quote some of Augusta Evans Wilson's Infelice, a few passages which so clearly explains this:

"Are we to accept the unjust and humiliating dogma that the more highly we cultivate feminine intellect, the more un feminine, unlovely, unamiable the individual certainly becomes! Is a woman sweeter, more gentle, more useful to her family and friends because she is unlearned? Does knowledge exert an ascendant influence upon female temper, or—produce an ossifying effect on female hearts? Is ignorance an inevitable concomitant of refinement and delicacy? Does the knowledge of Greek and Latin cast a blight over the flower-garden or a mildew in the pantry and linen closet;—or do the classics possess the power of curdling all the milk of human kindness, all the stream of tender sympathy in a woman's nature, as rennet coagulates a bowl of sweet milk? Can an acquaintance with literature, art and science so paralyze a lady's energies, that she is rendered utterly averse to, and incapable of performing those domestic offices, those household duties so pre-eminently suited to her slender dexterous busy little fingers?"

All observation and reason answer no! True practical education prepares a woman for her duties in life. There are two kinds of education: True and false. True education teaches a woman to be true, pure and womanly, doing whatever her hands findeth to do. The false teaches there is "no time but the present, and to make it profitable to self. A thorough practical education does not consist of all the dead and buried languages, the fancy arts and sciences. It is very pleasant to paint or draw beautiful pictures, to converse in different languages, to be able to calculate the distance between the earth and different planets, to decorate home with beautiful fancy work, but how much more pleasant to understand the art of cooking, so that the most dainty appetite may be satisfied with wholesome, well prepared food. How much more pleasant to know how to do the many things needed in a case of sickness and absence of a doctor. Go to the cities among the factory girls, and the sewing girls. Could they have received good practical educations many could find better and more lucrative work. Had their educations been a true practical one we would not read of so many ruined bodies and souls. Many believe that women are inferior in intellect, consequently incapable of receiving a good education. Women have been so taught and treated in days past that she almost thought so too. But they are proving that a false theory. I do not advocate these women's rights lecturers or anything of the kind. Women have a right to honorable labor and the wages she earns, but I dispute her right to the ballot box, halls of legislation, &c. While she is wasting her time in that her practically educate herself to make home pleasant, take care of the sick and comfort the dying. "Life is a passing shadow;" as much light should be crowded into it as possible. Women are, to a great extent kept down and many through false ideas select some vocation and study it slightly and practically. It is necessary to use the knowledge gained. It will be much easier to forget it than to have learned something when driven by the winds of adversity. Do away with these false ideas, this false pride and modesty, and remember that whatever is true and honest is honorable. It has been said that the women who rock the cradle may rule the nation. Can she do it with ignorance? No! She must thoroughly and practically educate herself to be able to be able to properly guide the fleet of life to paths that lead to a bright, glorious future. O that I could place this subject in its proper light, that I could raise it to its proper place in the estimation of the people.

Observer.

"Sowing Seeds" was the translation of the title of the French novel which the author of "The Countess" has translated into English. THE MISSOURI REPUBLICAN.

PROSPECTUS.

This paper, usually called the St. Louis Republican, published in the great trans-Mississippi empire, was established in 1808, amidst the now flourishing state of Missouri was a small territory and St. Louis a mere outpost, the headquarters of a few government officers and Indian traders. The REPUBLICAN has steadily increased from a diminutive sheet, printed weekly, and containing but little more than local and unimportant events, to a representative American journal, holding place in the front rank of the great newspapers of the world. Its history is the history of the West and South in all enterprises, and in all the material, political and social interests of the country. It is the exponent of the views of that class of citizens who seek to have the government conducted upon Democratic, popular and conservative principles, and in that regard is the organ of the most intelligent and thoughtful minds of the extensive region in which it circulates. It reaches a great majority of post-offices throughout Missouri, Illinois, Kansas, Iowa and Arkansas, and is disseminated more or less largely in every other state and territory, besides going to all important points in Europe. Its various editions reach over one hundred thousand homes, counting all the copies of the paper, and growing out of a steady and uniform growth, as population has increased and mail facilities expanded. Its readers are the "bone and sinew" of the country, well informed and patriotic.

The REPUBLICAN, from the care with which it is edited and conducted, the enterprise manifested in the collection of news from all quarters, its consistency in the advocacy of principles bearing upon the prosperity and well-being of the people, has built up a circulation not to be estimated merely by its numerical greatness.

The REPUBLICAN is published by men chiefly who have grown up from boyhood in the business, and have made the printing of a newspaper the study of their lives. It is practically impossible that any event of real importance could occur anywhere on the civilized earth and not be published in the REPUBLICAN before the rising of the next sun. With the means and the purpose to publish all the news, readers of our columns will have no reason to look further for a history of the times.

To those engaged in commerce, and indeed all who buy or sell, or are concerned in what is bought and sold, the REPUBLICAN will supply all necessary and desirable information so far as it can be found in the most complete and careful commercial reports from every important trade centre and stock market in the world.

These are some of the features of a concern that is known throughout the West and South as the "Old Herald."
