TERMS: $1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.
DOBYNS & CURRY PUBS.
FRIDAY, NOV. 2, 1893.

The outlook for female suffrage in Washington Territory is good. A bill conferring the right has passed the lower house of the Legislature by a vote of two to one.

The Governor of Massachusetts and his Attorney-General, by their revengeful and illegal action toward Mrs. Leonard, woke up the women of that State. They will naturally want to know what they are, if women are not "persons."

The United States in 1835, exported cotton goods to the value of about $2,800,000. During the first eight months of the present year our export of cotton goods amounted to more than $8,400,000. English cotton goods have been driven from the American and from many European markets.

It is nothing new for the Democrats to carry Ohio. In 1849, 50-51-52 and '53 they carried the State by round majorities. They again elected their ticket in 1873 and '74. In 1882 the majority was 19,115 votes, while in 1883 it is 9,893. It is a wonder what that Democratic roster is crowing about.

When the Republican party began its gigantic task of reducing the vast National debt piled up in crushing a Democratic rebellion, the annual interest charge was $4.29 per annum for every man, woman, and child in the country. It is now ninety five cents per annum. An increase of population has of course assisted.

The tariff bill, which the Democrats have denounced so freely as doing nothing to lessen the taxes, has been in operation three months, and the figures show that it has lightened the burden about $20,000,000. This fact is worth remembering in connection with the other things for which the thanks of the people are due to the Republican party.

The Kansas City Times one of the leading Democratic papers of the State, pronounces the Chinese "the cheapest and most faithful laborers in the world." In California the Democratic papers claim that their party alone opposes Chinese immigration, and refer to John not as "the most faithful laborer in the world," but as "the almond-eyed heathen," and "the moon-eyed leper." Circumstances alter cases.

Upon the recommendation of the commissioner of pensions the secretary of the interior has ordered the suspension of the following named pension attorneys: J. K. C. C. of Rockland, Maine, Francis Register of Philadelphia, Wm. H. Druen, of Philadelphia, J. B. Stevens & Co., of Cleveland, Washington, Detroit and Chicago, Wm. C. Wells & Co., of Washington, D. C., & Jas. H. Russell & Co., of Trenton, N. J. The commissioner recommended that some of the above named persons be disbanded. The suspension, however, is preliminary to disbarment if the charges are proven. The recommendations of Commissioner Dudley for the suspension or disbarment are based upon the general charge of improper practices before the pension office.

The following address has been issued by the "old line" Democracy of Massachusetts: "Without abating our opposition to the political views and methods of the Republican party, we believe Democratic success in the future can be neither deserved nor achieved unless we free ourselves from the charge of supporting candidates who have lowered the standard of political morality. We speak to your patriotism and sober common sense to oppose the re-election of Benjamin F. Butler. Caring nothing for party principles he subordinates every public interest to his own aggrandizement. Should he again be elected the Democratic party of Massachusetts would be held responsible for his administrative acts and eccentricities, past and future, while no responsibility attaches to us for any acts of Mr. Robinson. Such being our belief, we can now declare we intend to do all in our power to secure the defeat of General Butler, and we urge all Democrats to join with us in such action."

The meeting of the union and confederate officers on Bull Run field shows the war is ended. They really met as brothers, and the only reminiscences of that evil day twenty years ago, were jokes and historical addresses, the one full of humor which was appreciated by both sides, the latter devoted of all stings and prejudice, we may call this "the third battle of Bull Run." In the first and second battles the soldiers pelted each other with shrieking shells and whistling bullets, but in this latter engagement the heaviest assault was made with compliments and every man was wounded. The scars of war were covered by the wash of admiration and fraternal love rained the field where the curtain rolled up on our later tragedy. Where confederate and union wrestled in death in those days of July 21 and August 29 they walked arm in arm these pleasant October days, distant only the time that it takes a baby to grow to manhood, from the terrible time when men died for principle and the women waited for the waving union. Bull Run is a splendid place to meet. If the past and present can shake hands on that field, and walk arm in arm over that field, we know we are a nation, "one and inseparable, now and forever."—Kansas City Journal.

PITHY POINTS.

There is not a savings bank in Georgia. The Chiban troops have evacuated Lima. The New York Times considers Butler as a joke.

A mountain of copper ore has been discovered in Nevada. Hoody's majority has been simmered down to 1,383. 'Rah! The prospects for a row between France and China are brightening.

There were 218 business failures in the United States and Canada, last week. Gen Hancock is said to be desirous of becoming the Democratic candidate for the presidency.

Judge Noonan, of the St. Louis Court of Criminal Correction, has decided that playing poker is a felony. Some sixty of those lately engaged in the strike at the railroad yards in East St. Louis, have been indicted.

The Democratic prospects are excellent in Alabama—200,000 youngsters are growing up without schooling. Did the people of Ohio who voted for Hoody understand that in so doing they were vindicating Vallandigham? Frank James' case was called in the Davless circuit court at Gallatin last week, and was continued until December.

Wisconsin farmers are entitled to the belt. A couple of sharpers are making fortunes selling them "cyclone destroyers." Caiet Whittaker, formerly of West Point, has established a school for colored youths at Charleston. Boys with slit ears need not apply.

The Cincinnati Commercial winds up the season with the following: "Judge Hoody's male era exceeded Foraker's." That's the very last. Twenty-six of the thirty-eight states have Democratic governors. Twenty-seven of the thirty-eight states had Democratic excellencies in 1877.

Secretary Folger has made requisition on the civil service commission for five men to fill $900 clerkships which have been usually filled by women. Gov. Butler's administration illustrates Democratic reform. He has spent over $400,000 more than his Republican predecessor, and has nothing to show for it.

A Charleston, S. C., man has a petrified oyster. He is in daily receipt of hundreds of letters from church societies contemplating giving oyster suppers this winter. The population of Ireland is 4,000,000 less than it was thirty-eight years ago. It has declined almost one-half. At this rate the island will be depopulated in fifty years more.

According to the declaration of the Pedalia Democrat man, Dan G. Taylor, of St. Louis, was a radical in 1861-2. The Democrat man would not have dared to tell Taylor so in those years. Bookwalter spent $25,000 to help carry Ohio for the Democrats, and now claims that his ungrateful party is about to bring a Tildenite forward for the United States Senate instead of himself. The Old Man of the Bar! is a very cunning wire-puller.

"Turn the rascals out," shouts a leading Democratic editor. The late Governor of Kentucky took the philosopher at his word, and turned over 800 out of the penitentiary. There have only been 199 murders in Kentucky since the 1st of January.

Governor Crittenden has replied to the demand of the Citizens' Organization of St. Louis. He declines to accede to the demand. The Governor evidently is not disposed to abrogate the bidding of his enemies. Now what is Bronthead, et al, going to do about it?

On the 6th of November elections will be held in the following states: Connecticut, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Mississippi, Nebraska, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania and Virginia. Only the states of Massachusetts, Maryland, Minnesota and New Jersey elect governors.

The Enquirer-Sun, published at Columbus, Georgia, declares that the ignominious death of Captain Wirz was a crime more horrible than any ever committed at Andersonville. It is perfectly proper for Southern Democratic papers to defend Wirz, for, aside from his personal cruelties, he simply carried out the instructions of his superior, Jefferson Davis. When the tyrant Nero died there was still somebody bold enough to strew flowers on his tomb.

The trichinosis in Saxony is increasing and spreading. There are 500 officially reported cases. The mortality has reached the unprecedented average of twenty per cent. of the total number of infections. In many of the districts entire families are prostrated. The scientists who have been studying the plague have announced that the disease will become epidemic if it continues to develop for the full period of a month as it has increased in the twelve days during which it has already existed.

Farmers tell us that there is considerable old corn in the country. Even if the present crop should be short one-half, which is not likely, there will be enough for all practical purposes, and grain need not be high. The experience of two years ago taught our farmers a practical lesson, and one they will not soon forget, and that is not to part with all of last year's crop till they knew what this year's crop will be. The lesson has proved valuable the present year, many farmers have enough old corn in their cribs to last them through this winter, if they did not raise a "hub-bub" this year.

For THE HOLY COUNTY REVIVEL.
"A Circumstance."

BY MADGE WILDER.

The Warner residence was that night all life, surrounded by artistic drapery, such as the West could command. As lovely as it may have been it was not so beautiful as its young mistress. Never, in her life, was her heart so quickened. Never, to her, were faces so bright and happy. Every thing had received a touch from her reviving and animated spirit. The heart sent to her face the throbs of its own excitement, to lighten her beauty. Charles Herford was for the first time in seven years a guest. They together unfolded the brightest history of their lives. It was a pleasant reunion.

"Mr. Herford," said Maggie Warner, as she stood in the hallway to bid him good-night, "do you often think of our past lives?" "Ah! often, so often; what a pleasure it is to contemplate and study the future from thoughts of the past. Where is there more pleasure than to discover the principles, underlying our cherished ideals. 'Tis thus with me when I think of those whom I regard. Oft have I looked back over my past life with a feeling of true enjoyment. Oft have I beheld in the imagery of the soul, clustered around every change of my remembered life, those whom I love."

"Where," added she, making indentures in the hat she held, "is human happiness? It must be those happy moments and hours, gathered here and there and held off at the distance of the future. How much do we—it is not a question. We do build so much of our lives upon these circumstances."

"Yes," responded he, "to love one of the purest and noblest of nature is but to realize a paradise of human invention." With this he said good night. It is almost impossible for woman to conceal the foreboding of the individual and a if attachments of her heart. In the presence of one whom she holds in high appreciation, and under the prore of his manly influence, to the discerning eye and diving mind, the discovery of plausible admiration and wo nally love, is an easy task. Every act and every word, seems to have a touch of tenderness, sympathy, kindness and love. The eyes show a distant watchfulness and a secret care. Reason cannot guard the avenues of Love; nor place restraint upon the be-ligerent heart. Love is impatient, and cannot await the decree of truant judgment. No phrase in the vocabulary of the affections, is more certain to betray this unexpressed regard, than the oft repeated words "good-night!" The mournful accent, the yielding cadence spoken in a low, sweet, mellow tone, with a reserved look and down cast eyes with melancholy and meditative mien, strike the heart of the receiver with such intensity, that almost unconsciously reciprocal interest is awak-ened by the unclasping of hands followed by meeting eyes, radiant with the light of love and resplendent with joy.

From the Herford place to the Warner residence, was a distance of one mile, through the woods and across the hills. And the last that was heard of young Herford was his departure from that residence on that particular night. He could not be traced to any point, and very quietly the uncle had searched everywhere and now, that one week had passed, he became uneasy, fearing that evil had overtaken him. There were suspicious circumstances connected with his disappearance. Byles the saloon keeper had been at the mansion, ostensibly to pay to George Herford some interest upon borrowed money; yet the same would not be due for many months. The minister began to revive in spirits, upon which the uncle looked with suspicion; not thinking perhaps the mere absence of his enemy might produce that effect. It was supposed that Charles Herford had been called home upon business matters claiming his immediate attention; so it has been given out by George Herford. Now, he was debating in his own mind what course he should take in reference to the disappearance of his nephew. In that morning's paper, he saw that Byles had sold his saloon and was going west to begin the same business on the frontier. These circumstances confirmed his suspicions; and he at once rode over to the city to confer with the officers in relation to the matter, and contemplated apprehending the saloon-keeper until the mystery could be solved. And to his surprise, at the side of the road as he approached the city, his attention was called to an advertisement of a "Public Sale" at the "Vesper Place" of all personal property, including the household goods. Before an hour had passed, the city was wild with excitement, and the wildest conjectures and the most unreasonable theories were current upon the streets.
