INTEREST OF HUMANITY

They Are Now Slowly Reassembling and Filling the Lane.

Six years ago the forces of humanity were scattered before the war spirit. Now they are slowly reassembling and piecing together their lines of communication. Up to the spring of 1914 there was over the world a strong bond of racial consciousness which seemed to be strengthening, and which was taken by many to be an earnest of perpetual peace. There was much talk of universal brotherhood. International societies for various ethical culture, and philanthropic purposes existed, and there was a pretty well-defined organization looking to the settlement of international disputes by arbitration or by something akin to international judicial procedure. And these endeavors were all inclusive. No nationality was shut out, nor did the representatives of any one nation hesitate to co-operate with those of any other.

When the war madness broke loose this fine fabric of altruism, kindness and mutual service, which had been generations in building, was shattered in a few months, and a scourge of international hatred took its place. To judge that the majority of mankind willed such a calamity is to convict the human race of insanity.

Whatever may be the future verdict of history, the evidence is now sufficiently clear that the greed and selfishness of a few thrust upon the many the horrors which war entails. The consciousness of this ought to give form and direction to the efforts of restoration just beginning. Under the leadership of the American Red Cross, the Red Cross societies of the world are organizing an international league to carry on a world work of mercy and help. Other philanthropic institutions are sending out workers supplied with enormous funds to rehabilitate stricken peoples and restore something of the comfort and prosperity of pre-war conditions. With the results of such labor must come a revival of international good feeling, a binding up of the wounds of abrid and a return to realization of kindred interests, hopes and longings in the hearts of all men.

But to what avail will be this restoration unless it fortifies itself against future destruction? Admitting that it represents the desires and the aspirations of a majority of mankind, can not a way be found to effect the rule of the majority? Can not the majority so prepare itself as it rebuilds that it shall be able to protect itself against the machinations of greed and selfishness and cruelty in the future? Herein is the basis of the true league of nations. Unless that league is founded in the good will of men of different nations it will have no power and little influence. But the determined endeavor of all constructive forces to protect themselves against the elements of destruction ought to find a way to end war. The best thought of all right-minded men should be bent on this purpose.—Omaha World-Herald.

WHERE IS IT?

What Has Become of the Plate Glass So Plenty Before the War?

One of the most enjoyable diversions just now seems to be the driving of a truck, or auto through some Felix street plate glass window. Last Tuesday a couple of Andrew county farmers drove post-haste into a plate glass front on that busy street, and every day like accidents occur: Then when it comes to replacing the glass there is none—why the scarcity?

And also when the wild and woolly driver isn't butting his way into a perfectly innocent business establishment, a howling sale generally comes about and takes the job off his hands. The number of empty display window frames, or those boarded up against further disaster, is appalling. The proprietors of the various marts thus afflicted are up against the real thing when it comes to replacing the smashed crystals, which prompts us weekly to inquire why there isn't any plate, to speak of, in the open market. The same question has been asked and howled and sung about sugar, print paper, gasoline, etc., etc.

Is some thrifty person hoarding plate glass, even as oil wells have been capped, and paper and sugar stored away for future market prices? Surely plate glass can be manufactured in sufficient quantities to meet America's present building program without skipping every source of supply to the bone. And what fun can the enthusiastic joy-driver have when there aren't any more display windows to drive through?

What will the gentle Missouri zephyrs have to look forward to, we ask?

"Now, really, the up-state delegates were not interested in that Jackson county row at the Republican convention in Kansas City," said E. G. Huff, editor of the Cedar County Republic, "and it wouldn't surprise me to find out that they were dragging out that row all night just to keep us in the city where we could have strawberries for breakfast and let the women put in another day shopping. Anyway the delegates left about 120,000 more in Kansas City."

holds in the hollow of its hand a generous helping of INDEPENDENCE for the farmer. It is destined to become one of the richest agricultural sections of the United States. Land that was at one time devoted entirely to cattle grazing TODAY is carved into farms and the newcomers already are reaping financial rewards far beyond their most sanguine anticipations. Each succeeding year has increased the yield of all classes of crops, and so well have the people of this community prospered that they enjoy luxuries that were undreamed of before they cast their lot in this favored spot.

Sugar Beets yield 20 tons to the acre and are easy to raise. Wyoming will soon be one of the greatest producers of this necessary staple in the union.

The Frank Land & Investment Company is the forerunner in that locality and has choice sections for sale.

If you want a HAY, CATTLE, OR SHEEP RANCH, DRY, IRRIGATED OR SUGAR BEET FARM in any size acreage—WE HAVE IT, and PRICED RIGHT.
