NUMBER 17.

DEATHS

REV. D. C. BOLTON.

Rev. DeWitt Clinton Bolton, 66-years-old, died very suddenly Tuesday night about 11 o'clock of an attack of acute oedema of the lungs. Mr. Bolton had been at the college Tuesday evening to attend the prohibition oratorical contest and was returning to his home on East Yerby. He was near the home of A. B. Hoy, 547 East Summit, when attacked with his fatal illness. He called Mr. Hoy from the yard to come to his assistance. Mr. Hoy hastened to summon Dr. Manning and Mrs. Bolton. The doctor soon found that Mr. Bolton was beyond physical help, he having lost consciousness about five minutes after lying down, and remained in that condition until the end, which came about a half hour after entering the Hoy home. Mr. Bolton was taken suddenly ill February 25th while on his way home from prayer meeting at the First Baptist church, and stopped at the home of A. J. Graves on South Lafayette for help, but soon recovered from the attack and was able to be around as usual.

The passing of this good man is a great shock and sorrow to the whole county. He was a truly christian gentleman and will be greatly missed by all who knew him. He has been the pastor of a number of churches in Saline, Gilliam and Grand Pass being his last pastorate which churches he was serving at the time of his death. He has been clerk of the Saline Baptist Association the past sixteen years and stood high in the denomination. He recently wrote a history of the Baptist church in Saline county.

Mr. Bolton was born in Cole county near Jefferson City in 1844 and was the son of the late Dr. Thomas L. Bolton, who died a number of years ago at Lexington, Mo. He was a graduate of William Jewell College at Liberty and has been in the Baptist ministry since a young man. He was married to the surviving wife, who was Miss Lena Graves, daughter of the late Jerry Graves. November 17, 1881, at the Graves home in the Fairville neighborhood. Marshall has been the home of the family the past fifteen years. The following children survive: Mrs. J. R. Clappitt of Marshall, Mrs. George R. Duncan of Okla., Cal., Ralph Bolton of Kansas City, Margaret, Cassie, Perry and Hatcher Bolton, all at home.

The funeral took place at the First Baptist church Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock and the service was in charge of Rev. G. W. Vatcher of Columbia and Rev. Wm. Vardean, assisted by the local ministers. Burial was at Ridge Park cemetery. Mortician P. M. Walker had the funeral in charge.

The directors of the Saline County Fair Association are making arrangements to erect a $2,500 building for farm exhibits at the fair grounds. An effort is being made to make big improvements in all farm exhibits ever last year. About $200 will be offered on corn and $250 on poultry. The poultry premiums will be as good as those offered at the state fair. A prize of $100 will be offered for the best display of farm products. The races will also be of the very best, the same horses entering here as will be shown the following week at the Independence fair. The fair association will receive this year $200 state aid. IDEAL FARM NEIGHBORHOOD

The solution of the farm problem—that is, the holding of a standard class of people upon the land—will be accomplished not only when country life is made adequately and permanently satisfying, writes Mabel Carney in Country Life and the Country School. Part satisfaction, even financial prosperity, does not suffice. The wealthiest agricultural states show even greater rural depletion during the last decade than the poorer sections. In Illinois, which ranks first in farm values, rural population decreased in sixty-eight counties between 1900 and 1910. In Iowa the total rural population decreased 7 per cent during the same period. A significant aspect of this shifting of farmers is the rapid growth of tenantry and landlordism. Forty per cent of the farms in the United States are now operated by tenants. Deserted churches, poor schools, broken communities and outlives poor farming, all declare the evils of this system. No satisfying rural civilization throughout the history of agriculture has ever been constructed upon a system of tenantry and landlordism. The cornerstone of every successful rural social order is that land shall be tilled by those who own and cherish it. It is therefore apparent that solving the farm problem means holding land owners in the country. To do this it is necessary to make country life as satisfying as that of the town or city. That this can be done is exemplified in many country neighborhoods, but nowhere better than in the Clear Creek community in Putnam county, Illinois.

In this community there is no dissatisfaction, no moving to town and practically no rural problem. The people of the Clear Creek neighborhood, with two or three exceptions, are all land owners, each man owning only the land he can personally operate, usually from 80 to 150 acres. All are economically prosperous because scientific farming is the rule. The homes of the community, though by no means magnificent, are comfortable and attractive, and, like the farms, carefully planned and scientifically managed. But the distinguishing feature of this neighborhood, the magnet that draws and holds contentedly about it some of the most capable men and women in the state, is a well-defined and roundly developed community center, consisting of a consolidated school, a grange and a church.

This school, with its beautiful wooded grounds of twenty-four acres, its commodious, well-equipped building, its well-trained teaching force and its excellent course of study worked out in terms of country life, and affording instruction through an accredited high school, has attracted the attention of educators and country life workers throughout the United States. The John Swaney Consolidated School to quote a committee of the National Educational Association, "is probably the most ideal country school in the United States."

Within a few rods of the school building stands the Grange Hall, where twice a month for the last forty years Clear Creek people have met for social and educational purposes and have discussed questions of agriculture and country life. To the dominating influence of the Grange more than to any other single force is due the progress that marks this community. Grange influence has developed leadership, has sustained a high idealism of personal integrity and social responsibility and, above all, has fostered the spirit of co-operation through which this idealism has been worked out and made tangible for community benefit.

But the highest expression of personal and social idealism in the Clear Creek neighborhood is found in the little plain "meeting house". This church of early Quaker establishment is a true community institution, demanding neither creeds nor doctrines and preaching religion in terms of country life. All who seek fellowship with God through magnifying the Godship of men and cherishing "the worth of the native earth," are welcomed to its membership.

Good schools, churches, efficient labor, social advantages and all the attractions that draw farmers to the town or city are the result of community effort. The city, it is commonly agreed, has outstripped the country. In the last analysis this predominance is due chiefly to the greater degree of school consciousness, or community mindedness, and

SCOTT-OWENS.

Mr. and Mrs. C. K. Scott of west Marshall received the announcement last week of the marriage of their second son, Walter H. Scott, to Miss Pauline Uhl Owens of Clarksburg, W. Va., at the bride's home, 130 Daisy St.

The groom is well known here having been reared in this city. He went to Clarksburg about a year ago to assist in the construction of the new water plant. His many friends here join in wishing him a long and happy married life.

The following clipping was taken from the Clarksburg Telegram:

In the presence of a few friends and relatives Miss Pauline Uhl Owens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. Q. Owens and granddaughter of the late Rev. J. D. Leachman, was united in marriage to Mr. Walter Harrison Scott, of Marshall, Mo., Saturday evening in the home of her parents at 130 Daisy street. The Rev. W. C. Taylor, pastor of the First Baptist church, officiated.

As the first strains of the wedding march from Tannhauser, played by Miss Cora Reese Smith, the bridal party descended the stairway. The bridegroom and his best man, Mr. Edgar Moore, entered the parlor from the rear of the reception hall. The matron of honor, Mrs. Guy R. Sinsel, entered the parlor from the front hall, followed by little Miss Mary Barnett bearing the wedding ring, which was resting in the heart of a rose on a beautiful white satin pillow. Then followed the bride and they were met by the minister in front of a group of ferns and palms, where the impressive ring ceremony was performed.

During the ceremony Miss Smith played softly "The Sweetest Story Ever Told." The bride wore a gown of white crepe chene over white mullin and carried bridal roses. The matron of honor was beautifully gowned and carried pink roses. The ring bearer wore pale blue messaline. After the ceremony dainty refreshments were served. The bride having grown to womanhood in the city is loved by all who know her.

The bridegroom is a worthy young man, liked by all who know him, having made many friends since coming to the city.

The happy couple will be at home to their many friends at 130 Daisy street.

FOREE-GRIFFITH.

A very quite but pretty home wedding occurred at the residence of Rev. C. C. Cox, 420 East Yerby, 7:30, Thursday, April 9, when Mr. E. P. Foree and Miss Adol Griffith were united in bonds of holy wedlock. Only the immediate friends were present.

Miss Griffith, whose home is near Nelson has been making her home with her sister, Mrs. W. M. Keith for the last few years. She has endeavored herself to all who have met her and she possesses those qualities that will make her a help mate in every respect.

Mr. Foree has been employed at the shoe factory for nearly 4 years and has shown himself to be a quiet industrious young man.

The bride wore a becoming blue, with hat to match.

After a few days visit to the brides mother, Mrs. Flora Griffith near Nelson, they will go to housekeeping.

Their many friends join in congratulations, wishing them much happiness in life.

WILLIAMS-SWINNEY.

Frank R. Williams of Lynchburg, Va., and Miss Bess Swinney were united in marriage Tuesday, April 14 at 8:30 p. m., at the home of the bride's parents in Gilliam. Rev. Alexander of Nevada, Mo., officiated.

Long city dwellers. Farmers as a class are intensely individualistic. As a consequence their communities are poorly developed and sustain fewer and weaker social institutions than are found in the cities. Here lies the crux of the whole rural problem. Hence the significance of the community idea in country life.

Community building requires co-operation. If the community idea expresses the dominating need for the reconstruction of country life, co-operation, as most students of rural social life concede, then becomes the keynote in the solution of the farm problem. Efficient social institutions and the other satisfactions of modern life which draw country people to towns are the result of co-operative effort. To bring these satisfactions to the country farmers must put aside small differences, overcome their excessive individualism and consistently work together for the highest good of the community.

CURRENT EVENTS

King Gustave of Sweden underwent a surgical operation at the Sophia hospital at Stockholm, for extensive ulceration of the stomach. The operation lasted two hours and at its conclusion it was announced that the King's condition was satisfactory, although he was very weak.

Twenty-five million dollars is the amount the United States agrees to pay Columbia for the partition of Panama and the acquisition of the canal zone in the treaty signed in Bogota by American Minister Thompson and Columbian officials. The Columbian Congress will be called in special session to ratify the treaty before it is placed before the United States Senate.

The spring elections, last week, were of interest. In Kansas City the Democrats re-elected Mayor Jost and the entire ticket with him except four aldermen. Commission form of government was one of the issues and lost. In Illinois local option was the issue and the election resulted in closing over one thousand saloons in the state largely due to the votes of the women.

President Wilson has let it be known that he had unqualified confidence in the wisdom and fairness of the Organization Committee's decision in designating the 12 Federal reserve bank cities. This announcement was accepted as evidence that the dissatisfied cities will get little comfort from the President. The most bitter protest was received in the form of a resolution adopted by a mass meeting in New Orleans. The awarding of two banks to Missouri is declared to have been wise and not founded on favoritism.

Mrs. Lillian M. N. Stevens, national president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and vice-president of the World's W. C. T. U. died at her home at Portland, Me. She was taken ill shortly after returning to her home from conducting a strenuous campaign before congress for a national prohibition law. The night before she died she was told that Secretary Daniels had prohibited the use of liquor in the navy and it made her very happy. Mrs. Stevens was formerly a school teacher, but has been active in the W. C. T. U. work for many years.

The Dowager Empress Haruka of Japan, died at the Imperial Villa at Namazu. She was 64 years old. She succumbed suddenly when it was thought she was on the road to recovery from an illness that had lasted several weeks. The Coronation of the Japanese Emperor, which had been fixed for November 10, has been postponed until 1916, owing to the death of the Dowager Empress. The reason for the long delay is that the seed of the rice used in the sacred ceremony must not be ripened during the period of national mourning.

Secretary of the Navy Daniels has signed an order which prohibits the use or introduction of intoxicating liquor on any vessel of the United States navy or within any navy yard or shore station after July 1. It will be a violation of naval regulations in the future for any officer or sailor or visitor to a ship to have in his possession any liquor. Officers living on naval reservations on shore will be prohibited from having liquor in their private homes. Wives of such officers will not be permitted to serve rouches or other liquors at social affairs. It is expected in Washington that an effort will be made to get the War Department to issue a similar order to the army.

William S. Benton, British subject, was not slain by Gen. Villa but by Rodolfo Fierro, late major-general and superintendent of railroads for Villa, according to the report of the investigating committee appointed by Gen. Carranza. The report says that Benton visited Villa and abused him and that his arrest followed. Fierro is said to have been detailed to take Benton from Juarez to Chihuahua & that he killed Benton at Samalayuca. The alleged slayer, is said, reported to Villa that he killed Benton as he tried to escape from the train and buried the body at Samalayuca. The report says Villa had the body removed to Chihuahua and then he discovered that the man had been shot three times in a manner that led him to believe that the shorts were not fired while he was trying to escape from a train. He caused the arrest of Fierro, who is still in jail, according to the report and who will be executed for his crime.

Eight hundred members of the Spanish colony of Terreon, who were expelled from Mexico by Gen. Villa after the defeat of the Federals, and the capture of the city, reached El Paso with their personal belongings and are now under the protection of the United States. Spain having entrusted her interests in Mexico to the American Government's care, Gen. Carranza has approved Villa's action in expelling the Spaniards and has said their property will not be confiscated. Among the refugees is Senor Rafael Arozana, said to be worth $17,000,000. All he saved was a few personal effects.
