F. G. FULKERSON, Business Manager

Thursday, February 20, 1890.

FOR THE G. A. R.

The days of the democracy in Missouri are numbered. The world's fair is in a fair way to be side-tracked indefinitely.

Russell Harrison has been making a speech at Atlanta, Ga.

It is said that Mr. Musick has endorsed Mr. Conrath for the postoffice. The air is getting blue.

We believe the good of the party requires the recognition of those that have helped to bear the burden.

One by one the democratic postmasters are being retired to private life. The republicans don't object.

The President and Secretary Blaine attended the dedicatory exercises of the Carnegie Library at Pittsburg on the 19th inst.

The young king of Spain has become better known through the world than anybody of the same age now living.

The politician of Europe is still undecided as to whether or not Emperor William is sincere in his labor proclamations.

The legislature this year and a republican governor next, is the republican program. Let the news go abroad.

The public is given the gratifying information that the enumerators are directed to follow "the de jure rather than the de facto system." Thanks, awfully.

Missouri is rapidly paying off her bonded debts, county and state. In 100 years Missouri will be the greatest state in the American union with a population of 20,000,000.

The Catholic fair was a grand success, and great credit is due the ladies for the excellent meals furnished and served during the entire fair.

We would like to see the solid south broken, but doubt the advisability of a federal election law because the solid south can be broken in a much more effective manner.

All booms bring their sorrows. The collapse of the Russell, Kansas, bank is attributed to the depreciation of farm lands in Kansas that got clear out of reach in prices during the prosperous boom of the country.

Mr. T. Houston Goodwin, who has been an untiring worker in the Democratic party for years doesn't seem to be good enough when it comes to distributing the offices. Tip is good enough when election time comes along, and then he is forgotten until the next election.

How beautifully the democratic bulldozer has subsided since Mr. Reed took charge of him. Such a complete collapse in such a short space of time is one of the results of taking a democrat by the seat of his pants and pitching him out of the back window.

The Blair educational bill is in danger. Strong opposition has been developed among republicans on constitutional grounds. If the bill is unconstitutional it of course, should not pass, but some provision should be made, it is possible, to wipe out the illiteracy of the South.

President Harrison no doubt finds it a very trying task to determine whom to appoint to office, when it is considered that for every small office there is from six to a dozen applicants. The Jefferson City postoffice contest is a fair illustration of the general scramble for office. Under the circumstances the wonder is how the president can avoid making mistakes.

The evident disposition to make further inroads upon the Indian territory since the opening of Oklahoma is now apparent to everybody, and it is only a question of time when the whole territory will be opened up for settlement. The white man is not supposed to let such a small matter as an Indian treaty stand in his way when his avaricious maw gets ready to masticate the territory, and Oklahoma just sharpened his teeth for the whole morsel, and he will have it. Whenever it takes place Ft. Smith will be the Kansas City of the southwest, as it is a ready wholesale distributing center for that country.

VICTORY CAN BE WON.

Republican success would be worth a great deal to Missouri. Every intelligent republican knows this, and knowing it ought to do everything possible for the success of the party. A republican victory would place the affairs of the state in the hands of progressive, public-spirited citizens, and would give old Missouri a boom that would soon place her far in advance of surrounding states. A republican victory would invite immigration and capital, encourage enterprise and industry, and give notice to the world that the people of Missouri were in favor of progress and improvement in every possible direction, of promoting every legitimate interest, and of building up and extending the industries of the state. A republican victory would be worth millions to the state. It would benefit every business, every industry, every occupation, except that of the politician, and every man, woman and child in the state. A republican victory would attract more attention to the state, and advertise it more extensively and in a more beneficial way than anything else that could be done. A republican victory is needed in Missouri. It is needed in order that the state may be properly governed and its interests properly served. A republican victory can be won if the right kind of work is done. The right kind of work to be done now is organization. Clubs ought to be organized in every part of the state. And, after thorough organization is effected, then the right kind of a ticket should be nominated and the right kind of men should be placed in charge of the management of the party and of the campaign.

With organization and the right kind of leadership and management the republican party can win a victory in Missouri. Without this very little can be done. Now is the time to go to work.—Boonville Republican.

We observe that Hon. Waller Young is a candidate for senator in the St. Joseph district. While we would like to see a republican elected in that district and hope that such will be the case, we can say to the democrats of St. Joseph that Waller Young is one of the best friends St. Joseph has ever had at the capital, a mistake will be made if they do not renominate him.

When one reads of the fiendish treatment suffered by the Siberian exiles, male and female, it is easy to understand why Russia is full of nihilists. It ought to be full of devils with red hot irons, with which to brood in everlasting racks the men that are guilty of such inhumanity. If it is the czar he should not complain when he finds dynamite on every side of him, for it is in that case a power in the hands of the helpless and innocent, and will be used in their defense against him in such outrages.

This democratic family organ on Madison street is greatly distressed about Archie Drake's candidacy for the Jefferson City postoffice. Archie feels very comfortable, and does not have to depend on public pay for an honest living—in which respect he differs from the proprietors of the family organ. Besides, Archie is no fool. The efforts of that paper to make him out such to the contrary, notwithstanding. The colored people see very plainly that the only use a democrat has for them is to use them, and when they fall in that the "Mississippi" idea is put in practice.

President Cleveland is quite a humorist. While attending a dinner in New York many jokes had been listened to at the expense of both the legal and medical profession. Mr. Cleveland said "that he had observed that when the jokers were sick or mused by the law they grew very serious.

When, however, the patient recovers, the old hardness and impotence return. The patient insists that his strong constitution carried him through, and the client declares that he always knew there was nothing in the case of his adversary. The defeated client, however, is left in a vigorous and active condition, not only in the complete enjoyment of his ancient privilege of swearing at the court, but also with full capacity to swear at his lawyer. The defeated patient, on the contrary, is very quiet, indeed, but could swear at his doctor if he had left his profanity in a phonograph, to be ground out by his executor."

It now looks as if the democracy has made a great change of base, politically, that in legislative bodies the minority should rule, especially if the minority are democrats; that a democratic legislature can be absent and present at the same time. That is, he can be dead or alive, but not speechless; that they have a right to block necessary legislation by not voting and declaring themselves absent. In order to correct this foolish nonsense we understand that a Prof. Reed in Washington has undertaken to give free instruction on constitutional law and parliamentary rule, and that he already has a large class of democratic congressmen who, we hope, will be much benefited. Some very eminent democrats have joined the class, Brockridge of Kentucky, Springer of Illinois and Gladlet Hoie Blaud of Missouri. But if this new idea should be adopted in Missouri, we feel confident Mr. Blaud will damage his own chances for getting back to congress on the minority plan. It does seem to us that democracy is getting very shaky when the great men of its party are afraid of majority rule and a free ballot. The hand writing on the wall is very plain to some of them, hence the minority must rule.

If the orchard is cropped continuously care must be taken to keep it well manured. Raspberries should be set out very early in the spring and use a rich, loose soil. Grafting can be done any time in February that the weather is mild enough.
