We are in receipt of a letter from a gentleman at Washington, D. C., saying: Learn, through "THE STATE REPUBLICAN" a journal, (not an organ) published at the state capital of Missouri, that the people are alive to the issue, and have resolved that this great waterway, the Ozark river, shall be open to the world before Canada is annexed to the U. S. Locks and dams from the mouth of the Ozark river into the state of Kansas is what is agitating the people of the Ozark Valley at this date.

Foreseeing the importance of the carrying trade to be developed by the reopening of the navigation on the Ozark river west beyond Osceola, Col. R. D. This boat is intended to ply between St. Louis and the farthest point beyond Osceola that can be reached by river tonnage.—Osceola Sun.

An Old Silver Coin.

Mr. George W. Walkers called last Saturday. He has a one dollar silver coin, coined by the United States, dated 1795. It is one Mr. Albert Walker received from Osceola store in this city about forty years ago.

Silver Statistics.

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 17.—The Director of the Mint to-day sent a letter to senator Cockrell with a statement showing the number of ounces of silver of standard fineness and the cost of it, used in the coinage of silver dollars; the number of silver dollars coined and the profits thereon each year from March 1, 1878, to December 31, 1889. The number of ounces used during this period was 200,727,000, and the cost $27,995,107. The number of dollars coined was 349,935,991, and the coinage charge $61,942,893.—Globe Democrat.

$61,942,893 is a very large sum of money. Supposing the demands of the silver men had been complied with and the sun had passed into their pocket, how or in what manner would the farmer or average citizen be benefited, or what possible benefit can the people derive if the profits on the coinage of silver is pocketed by the silver men.

Here's a Painter for You.

"To our readers we say be sure that you see Mrs. Barnett's great play, "Little Lord Fauntleroy." Then if you do not agree with me that the play is a masterpiece of its kind; the company capable to a degree approaching perfection; and unusually well balanced, that an evening at the theatre was never better nor more profitable spent, send the bill to us and we will pay it every time." Thus writes a southern critic of Mrs. Barnett's famous play, which is to be presented at Lohman's Monday, February 21, and judging from the success the piece has met with wherever produced, it is probable the people of this city accept the "plotter" at its full value.

Instructions for the Guidance of Those in Charge Receiving and Entertaining the Visitors.

The sixth annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, for the department of Missouri, will be held in this city on April 10, 11 and 12, 1890. It is the purpose of Grand Army men throughout the state to make the next state encampment not only an official representation of Grand Army posts, but a great reunion of all ex-union soldiers of Missouri, whether members of the Grand Army or not.

To the end that invitations may be extended, and that our comrades and their friends may be properly received and entertained during their stay at the state capital, committees from the post are announced, and comrades are detailed to serve thereon, as follows:

Dwight.

2. The duties devolving upon committees, as herein designated, are outlined as follows:

First.—It shall be the duty of the committee on invitation to invite all Grand Army posts and ex-union soldiers and their friends to attend the next state encampment, and participate in the great reunion of old soldiers who will be here at that time.

Second.—The committee on entertainment and music will be entrusted with the responsibility of engaging bands of music for the occasion, and of arranging for pyrotechnic displays, military drills and such other amusements as will contribute to the entertainment of our guests.

Third.—The committee on quarters are expected to ascertain the hotel, boarding and lodging house capacity of the city.

They will next endeavor to secure all public buildings, halls and other places that may be utilized for sleeping quarters and learn the capacity of each. They will also make a canvass of the city and ascertain from each head of a family how many persons can be accommodated by him or her and the price per day for board and lodging. The committee will then confer with the proper parties and make arrangements to have all the spare room in public buildings and halls filled, with costs. Having done this, and finding that sufficient room cannot be found to accommodate the anticipated turn out, they will take immediate steps to procure such a number of tents as will afford comfortable quarters to all visitors not otherwise provided for. A complete statement of where quarters may be had, from whom and the price charged per day, for lodging and meals, shall be furnished by this committee to the chairman of the committee on reception.

Fifth.—The committee on headquarters and decoration are charged with the proper decoration of the house of representatives wherein the official representation of the department will assemble, and with the decoration of the senate chamber, in which will meet the Women's Relief corps.

They will also decorate the reception rooms of the Women's Relief corps, and the headquarters of James A. Garfield post, No. 6.

Sixth.—The committee on street decoration are expected to construct arches and other appropriate decorations at the intersection of the principal streets along and across which the parade will pass, and elsewhere in the city, if, in their judgment, the same may be necessary.

Seventh.—The committee on camp fires will be necessarily governed by the condition of the weather immediately preceding and during the encampment. If the weather is favorable they are expected to prepare a great open air camp fire, but should it be otherwise they will arrange for entertainments of like character indoors.

Eighth.—The committee on parade will report to the post commander the route which, in their judgment, will be the most appropriate and best line of march for the parade. The report so made will be submitted to the department commander for his consideration.

Ninth.—The committee on purchases are expected to purchase flags, bunting and other supplies necessary to be used by the decorating committee. They will also purchase such lumber and other materials as are required for the erection of platforms for the encampment and speakers, and all other articles required to be purchased.

Tenth.—The auditing committee will examine into and certify to the correctness of all accounts against the "State Encampment Fund" before the same are presented to the post or quartermaster for payment.

Eleventh.—The reception committee will attend all trains bringing comrades to the encampment, whether the same arrive in day or night time. They will escort all visitors to proper quarters and see that their baggage is safely delivered wherever ordered. Upon the arrival of each day train bringing comrades to the encampment they will cause a salute of ten guns to be fired. They will also cause a salute of thirteen guns to be fired on arrival of the commander-in-chief, and a like number of guns when the department commander arrives. Sunrise and sun set guns will be fired during each day of the encampment. To carry into effect this provision of the order, I hereby detail as artillerymen, the following named comrades: Thomas H. McKenna, C. Staats, John Schaefer, S. L. McCormick, Nich-Voelkell, John Kieselbach, Wendell Baehle, Frank M. Gray. In addition to the duties above enumerated, the committee is expected to have carriages in waiting to receive the commander in chief and staff, and also the department and his staff. They will keep carriages and horses in waiting at department headquarters for use of the commander-in-chief and department officers. The committee on reception will supply themselves with appropriate badges to indicate their duties.

3. Through the kindness and liberality of the Germania club of this city, I am authorized to announce that your headquarters during the week of the encampment will be in Music hall, No. 230 East High street.

4. Every member of the post, whether detailed on a committee or not, is expected to show the utmost courtesy to visiting comrades and do all in their power for their proper entertainment.

5. Members of the post having homes and business houses are requested to have the same decorated during the encampment and illuminated on the night of the parade.

6. Comrades will wear their uniforms and badges during the encampment. By order of

JOHN T. CLARKE,
Post Commander.

JOHN OPEL,
Adjutant.

In many cases it will be best to paint the wounds made in pruning with lead and oil.
