HESS WINS HIS OWN GAME.
His Double in the Sixth Scores Two Runs and Clinches the Game.

Farmington defeated the Banner Buggies of St. Louis last Sunday by the score of 7 to 5. Hess pitched a good game, allowing 7 scattered hits and striking out 13. He virtually won his own game in the sixth, when the score was tied, with a corking double to left. The Banner Buggies scored two in the second on a single and two doubles; one in the sixth on a walk, a hit, a sacrifice and a wild pitch; two in the ninth on a walk, a double, a stolen base and a single. Farmington scored one in the first on a walk, a sacrifice and a single; one in the fourth on a hit, a stolen base and a wild throw; two in the sixth on an error, a single, a stolen base and a double; one in the seventh on an error and two singles, and one in the eighth on a single and two wild throws.

The features of the game were Hess' timely double in the sixth, R. Tillman's barehanded catch of Hess' throw to second in the fifth, and Rogers' catch of Asbury's Texas Leaguer in the fourth. The umpiring was of the same class as that of the previous game and of course everyone was satisfied. The Banner Buggies play a clean, fast game of ball and are one of the most gentlemanly bunch that ever played in Farmington. Next Sunday Farmington and Fredericktown will clash at Woodland. On May 12 these teams played a 2-2 game and the second meeting is sure to be an interesting one. The official summary:

J. M. Mosely, a Bloomfield man, advertised for a wife and the Post Office has been swamped with mail. As he is managing editor of the Bloomfield Vindicator, he is possibly seeking "copy" for an article on "How Easy it is for a Man to Marry."

Four prisoners in the Danklin county jail at Maiden cut out of a steel cell on the night of the 15th and made their escape. A reward is offered for the capture of the men, one of whom was to serve a penitentiary sentence. This is the fourth wholesale jail escape, and the Herald thinks that the county needs a new jail.

PRICE OF LIFE IS LOW.

London Roughs Will Put Any One Out of the Way Cheaply.

I am told that a £10 note will buy a man's life in London, that any unsuspecting person can fall into the Thames on a dark night, or break his neck going round a slippery, dark corner, or fall under a van, if a little bit of crisp paper changes hands, says the London Sketch. I know that a very distinguished playwright, wishing to work out the plot of a melodrama, went into a high-class den of thieves, made friends with some of the leaders, and unfolded to them as something he wished to put into execution the plan he had devised for his villain's action. He told his listeners that there was a very important financier that he wanted out of the way for 48 hours while he played the very dickens with the exchange with the stocks the financier controlled. He suggested to his listeners that an attractive lady and a yacht would be the simplest means of insuring this object. His hearers concurred. They knew the very yacht for the purpose: a skipper and a crew could easily be produced; and concerning the lady there would be no difficulty whatever. "Then, after the 48 hours, we will of course, bring him back," said the dramatist brightly, thinking of his fourth act. A cloud came over the faces of his audience. "Well, gov'nor, of course, if you wish it; but it would save such a lot of questions being asked if he just went quietly overboard," the spokesman suggested.

PLEASURE FOR AN EVENING.

Novel Idea in the Way of a Church Entertainment.

Here's a novel idea for a church entertainment which requires little preparation. A rustic bridge was built out from the stage, inclosing a square space that was used for a fish pond. Rocks and ferns were grouped along the edge of the stage, the floor was covered with green carpet, and a pretty meadow scene painted on coarse cotton was hung at the back of the stage, making a very picturesque setting for the pond, says the Cooking School Magazine. Steps led up to the bridge, and at the foot was a rustic lodge, where, on payment of a fee, the prospective fisher was given a pole and a circle of cardboard, upon which was marked the number of times he was entitled to fish. Thus equipped, he went up on the bridge and fished in the pond. Tickets were also sold by the bridge keepers. Refreshments were served, and there were candy and cake tables and two stalls where fancy articles were sold. One of these stalls bore the sign, "Fish Market." Here fish of many brilliant colors and quaint shapes were for sale; there were blotters, shaving cases, pin cushions and satchet bags. On the cake table were many toothsome fishes—chocolate and clear candy fishes and boxes of candy decorated with water color and pen and ink sketches, also sandwiches cut out with fish-shaped tin cutters, also cookies and small iced cakes. At intervals singing and tableaux may be given for variety.

PRICE BAKING POWDER, CHICAGO.

A Belgrade correspondent of the Potomac Journal says: Last week a terrapin was found on Lian Relfe's farm at Belgrade, on the bank of which was cut "J. J. Altemong, April, 1869." It has been 38 years since the name and date was cut. Altemong was the M. E. preacher at Belgrade at that time and was going through this field with Jesse Corum (now of Gunnison, Colo.) when he found the terrapin and cut the name and date. It has been found several times since by members of the Relfe family, each time in the same field.
