Woodmen's Banquet.

Last Saturday night was given at Covington the most successful Camp banquet that has ever been given in this county. There were more than five hundred people in attendance, and the grand spread furnished by the Covington Camp M. W. A. was ample to have fed two or three hundred more.

After the banquet, and after all in attendance had enjoyed much good music, the ladies and children were comfortably housed in the lower room of the building, where they had a most enjoyable time, although it stormed quite hard without. They used a phonograph, and while the storm blew a gale about the house, they listened to the latest songs and operatic stunts and gave no heed to the weather.

And above them in the M. W. A. hall were about 140 neighbors who were proceeding to give the mysteries of the order to six new members, and to say it was done in the most approved and up-to-date manner is but stating the truth.

A more harmonious and pleasurable gathering of friends and neighbors has never met in our county, and the business transacted for the good of the order will show far into the future.

There were many visitors from neighboring camps. Those from Hayti were: B. S. Stearns, H. L. Davidson, J. T. Buckley, J. L. Deleshmatt, Jack Edwards, Bates Byrd, John Fields, Robert Brooks and Gene Popham.

NOTES.
John Fields was foundered and had to be subjected to the water treatment and was unable to wear his shoes home. Neighbors provided him with a pair of Arctics.
J. T. Buckley was still eating when Old Sol began throwing arrows at the busy team of Foresters. He was especially fond of everything.
Escort Stearns says he has lived one day that had 36 hours, and don't remember of it being any shorter. He preserved his reputation as a hearty eater—if he did eat in a circle.
Bates Byrd and J. L. Deleshmatt couldn't help visiting the entertainment down stairs quite frequently—but there is nothing strange about that to those who observed their frustrated actions when a certain young lady was assisting them to their choice of dainties at the banquet.
Robert Brooks says he knows when he has a sufficiency, as well as when he has an insufficiency—and he don't intend eating anything more before Easter. He declared, (as he sweat,) that the coffee was so hot it fried his tongue.
Robert Popham enjoyed everything but the sad news of the death of "Old Scissor Bill." He and neighbors Buckley and Gene Popham said they scented trouble early in the evening but the storm carried it away.
H. L. Davidson divided his time between eating, laughing, and looking at his valentine. He said he got two mental photos that went rub off—J. T. Buckley and Gene Popham's exchange of civilities, and that rare and beautiful picture entitled, "Yes sir, make me an extra one."
Jack Edwards said he got himself an everlasting photograph of "Billy, The Goat," as well as of the six neighbors that rode him—(the goat.)
