

BE PATRIOTIC, URGES WILSON

President in July 4th Speech Says Business Interests Should be Loyal

REPLIES TO HIS CRITICS

Says People Will Support His Mexican Policy.—Touches on Panama

Philadelphia, July 4.—The most vigorous defense that President Woodrow Wilson has ever made of his administration came today in the shade of the historic oaks and elms in the rear of Independence Hall.

In the course of his patriotic address, which the President came from Washington to deliver, Mr. Wilson not only paid his respects to the critics of his Mexican policy, but included in his impassioned speech the opponents of his anti-trust measures and the administration policy toward the Panama Canal and Currency reform.

Some of his critics he called unpatriotic and he flayed others. "We love not only America, but we love that which lies nearest to our hands," said the President. There are in Washington today gentlemen who are true patriots, the members of the House and Senate who stay in the heat of midsummer to do business that is before them.

President Wilson declared that there had recently been made many allegations of facts about the business conditions in this country. He stated that the facts that have been presented by many business men did not tally with one another, and that he thought they were trying to serve an interest smaller than the interest of the nation itself.

The President declared his belief that the hearts of the American people went out to the stricken people of Mexico and that as soon as his position was understood it would be supported by the country.

He said, in explanation of his stand on the Panama Canal Tolls question, that the repeal of the bill to exempt American coastwise ships would be a violation of our treaty with England.

Eighty-five per cent of the Mexican people, the President said in touching on Mexico, never had a right to have a "look in" on their Government or how the other 15 percent were running it.

"I know the American people have a heart that beats for them just as it beats for other millions," Mr. Wilson continued. "I hear a great deal about the property loss in Mexico and I regret with all my heart that back of it all is a struggling people. Let us not forget that struggle in watching what is going on in front."

"I would be ashamed of the flag if we did anything outside this country which we would not do in it," the President declared. Speaking on Panama tolls, the President said the treaty with England might be a mistake, but its meaning cannot be mistaken, and he believed in keeping the nation's obligations. He believed in keeping the name of the United States unquestioned and unswayed.

Before the President got his speech well under way the crowd surged forward in such confusion that a panic was threatened. Two companies of marines and sailors stood before the speaker's stand and Mr. Wilson was forced to step several times, but finally got the crowd under control.

"Liberty does not consist in trying to get a front seat," he said with a smile at one point.

While the crowd was waiting on him to speak, Mrs. Smith, mother of one of the first sailors killed at Vera Cruz, greeted him. The President told her she should be proud of her son and shook her warmly by the hand.

"It must be a great comfort to you to have been the mother of such a hero," he said.

The threshing outfit belonging to Jake Keller was compelled to suspend operations Friday on account of a breakdown of some of the machinery. They had just begun threshing at the farm of William Laforte, about two miles west of town when the accident occurred. The necessary repairs have been sent for and it will perhaps be two or three days before they arrive.

Ethel Camden of East Cape was in the city on a shopping trip Friday.

HORSE DIES OF HEART FAILURE

Steed Being Driven by Alonzo Killian, Drops Dead at Poor Farm

Stricken with heart failure, a horse being driven by Alonzo Killian, an employe of the Blue Ribbon Ice Company of this city, dropped dead in front of the Poor Farm early Friday morning.

Mr. Killian, who had accompanied his wife to Jackson, where she was met by a sister who drove Mrs. Killian to her home on a farm west of Jackson, left the county seat shortly after midnight Friday.

The horse, which seemed to be in splendid health, showed no signs of fatigue. The trip to Jackson from the Cape, which was begun about eight o'clock Thursday evening, required more than a hour.

When they reached that city, Mr. and Mrs. Killian visited friends.

It was sometime after midnight when Killian hitched up and started for the Cape. The horse, which was a good traveler, showed no signs of being ill, but on the contrary left Jackson at a steady gait.

The return journey was made in nothing more than average time, and just as the horse rounded the curve in front of the county farm, the horse came to a sudden stop, moaned and dropped to its knees.

Mr. Killian jumped out of the buggy to investigate the trouble and was astonished to find the animal had died almost instantly. Death was due to heart failure, according to a veterinarian, who examined the carcass yesterday.

Mr. Killian was compelled to complete the journey on foot. He arrived in the Cape about 2:30 yesterday morning. He said it was the first time in his career that he knew of a horse dying of heart failure.

HORSE RUNS AWAY WITH MAN

Friday afternoon at about 5 o'clock Thomas E. Barber, a marble dealer of this city, met with a runaway accident near the corner of Frederick and William streets, which resulted in his being thrown from his buggy, and dragged for almost a block.

A witness of the accident said that Mr. Barber was driving East on William street, and as he approached the Frederick street crossing his horse became frightened at an engine.

The animal gave a sudden lunge and the driver was thrown from the buggy, and being unable to disentangle himself from the lines he was dragged over the hard pavement.

The timely aid of two laborers employed on the street work, saved him from being seriously hurt.

The two men succeeded in catching the frightened animal.

TALKATIVE WOMAN FINED.

Then She Gets Warrant for Wife of Man Accusing Her.

Amelia Kruse, whose home is at 309 South Boulevard, in this city, was brought before Judge W. H. Miller Friday morning to answer to the charge of disturbing the peace of Marvin Henry, who in his complaint alleged that the defendant had indulged in the use of some rather sassy language in expressing her feelings toward him.

After pleading guilty to the charge of disturbing the peace for which she was given a fine of one dollar and the costs, amounting in all to $10.80, Mrs. Kruse established by swearing out a complaint against the wife of the complaining witness.

Mrs. Henry was charged with disturbing the peace of Mrs. Kruse by the use of abusive and insulting language, etc., and Constable Scivally was authorized to summon the defendant to appear in Court this morning to answer to the charges that have been brought against her.

The two families live in the same house, and they don't seem to get along very well.

INCOME TAX REPORTS

Washington, July 3.—Totals of the individual income and corporation tax receipts by districts given by Treasury Department today, total a collection of $71,383,156.33 of which $43,079,819.44 was from corporation tax and $28,306,336.69 was from individual income tax returns. New York led all states with a total of $22,288,575.56 in taxes; Pennsylvania was second with $6,069,306.28. Illinois was third. The expected belated returns which will reach the treasury within the ten day grace period allowed by law, will swell the total of the two forms of tax close to $75,000,000.

RUNAWAY HORSE UPSETS A STEED AND ITS RIDER

Animal Owned by Braun Bros. Runs Over Horse, Burying It Under Wagon

NEGRO BOY, HURLED 20 FEET, IS UNHURT

Frightened Beast Continues Run Until It Falls and Skids Into Tree

A runaway horse belonging to the F. F. Braun Bros. Grocery Company of Haarrig Thursday night gave the residents of the southern part of the city an unusual thrill.

The horse, which was driven by Otto Overbeck, of 129 South Frederick street, broke away from the driver in front of the home of William Blank at 420 Williams street.

An order of groceries had just been delivered at the Blank home, and as Overbeck attempted to unhitch the animal it became frightened and broke away from the driver.

Turning the vehicle completely around the horse dashed west. Just before reaching Frederick street, the frightened animal ran into a horse ridden by William Jackson, a negro boy, and owned by E. A. Miles.

In the collision the negro boy was hurled to the roadside, but landed on a grassy plot and escaped injury. But the Miles horse was knocked down and the wagon drawn by the runaway lodged upon the Miles steed.

The animal belonging to the grocery company only stumbled, but regained its equilibrium and sped toward Sprigg street, leaving the Miles animal prostrated in the street with the grocery wagon on top of it.

A crowd, estimated at more than a hundred people gathered around the scene of the wreck and attempted to release the buried horse. But its efforts to extricate itself made some a precarious undertaking. The horse struggled alone for more than fifteen minutes, and finally uncovered itself, but not before so the wagon was reduced to wreckage.

The runaway horse, in the meantime continued its mad dash to Sprigg street, where it attempted to turn South, stumbled and fell, skidding across the street and into a tree. The animal's head struck the trunk of the tree. This collision stunned the beast, but did not injure it.

When it recovered its bearings, the horse arose, turned around and surveyed the route over which it had run. But the fall had subdued the animal and it remained standing until its driver reached it.

The Miles horse was badly hurt. The jolt of the collision and its scuffle to get from under the wagon removed much fur and badly injured its legs.

According to those who witnessed the runaway marveled at the fact that the negro boy escaped unharmed. According to spectators he was hurled a distance of twenty feet, and it is believed that only the soft landing saved him.

"I heard the horse coming," said the negro, "and when it headed toward my horse, I tried to get off, but before I had a chance to jump, that old black mare hit me."

"My horse fell, but the jar sent me winding into the gutter. I wasn't hurt but I sure was scared. When I got up I got up running, but when I saw the people begin to crowd around my horse, I went back and tried to get the wagon off."

Kentuckian Kills Man After Flirting With Wife.

Franklin, Ky., July 3.—Al Hester was shot and killed at Portland, Tenn., near here today, and E. R. Butt, County Commissioner, is in jail at Gallatin charged with the crime.

Hester was formerly postmaster and president of the Portland bank, and was very wealthy. There had been bad blood between the men for some time. Today Butt passed Hester's home four times and each time waved at Hester's wife, it is said.

Hester went into the street and Butt fired. Hester returned the fire and Butt ran into the barn. Shots from the barn killed Hester.

CITY 2 HOURS WITHOUT LIGHTS

Cars Stand Still and Business Houses and Residences Burn Candles

PLUG CAUSED TROUBLE

Blew Out at Power Plant and Employee is Badly Burned

Cape Girardeau was in an eclipse last night. For more than two hours residences and business houses were illuminated with candles and oil lamps.

A tube in a boiler at the power plant caused all of the trouble, according to the officials of the Missouri Public Utilities Company. It was blown out and an instant later the Cape resembled a farm house.

The street cars came to a standstill, one in the west end and another in front of The Tribune office. They remained in these positions from shortly before 10 o'clock until almost midnight.

When the lights went out the downtown streets were crowded with men and women, who groped about in the dark until they could find conveyances to carry them home.

Drugstores, restaurants, saloons and stores that were open at that time were left in total darkness, causing a run on candles. These sticks of tallow were placed up in residence windows as well as in the business houses downtown.

The street car crew curled up in the car seats and took a cat nap, and when the power was not turned on at 11 o'clock, people began to speculate as to whether the lights would burn again before sunrise.

But just before midnight the lights in the Missouri Public Utilities Company's downtown office were turned on and a moment later they were burning brightly up and down the street. Then it was not long until lighting conditions were normal.

While the accident which caused the eclipse was not of a very serious nature, it resulted in an injury to an employe at the power plant, George Ellis, one of the coal shovellers was struck by the flying bolt and badly burned on his right leg. He was taken to the office of a physician and then conveyed to his home. His condition is not serious.

The party of Big Flora campers who left this city Wednesday afternoon, sent two of their number back to the Cape for more supplies Friday afternoon. They report that everybody is having a delightful time, and that on the first day out they killed seventeen squirrels. Harlan Smith and Harvey Hooper joined the party Friday.

Capt. Thomas A. Lacey, formerly known as "Peck" Lacey among his boyhood friends in this city, came down from St. Louis Friday to spend the Fourth with his mother, Mrs. J. H. Rider and his sister, Mrs. E. A. Hayden.

Louis Whitmore, Fred Stock, Otto Breen and Wm. Frankfort drove down twice the big dredging machine at work Tuesday afternoon, and on their return the buggy broke down and the party were forced to walk several miles into town.

St. Louis arrived at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon with a good passenger list and a big cargo of wheat.
