

When a Business Man Needs Money

He Can Turn to His Life Insurance Policy and Quickly Obtain Cash.

He has no feeling of obligation as when he borrows from a bank, and his life insurance company is ready and glad to be of service.

But—Don't mortgage your life insurance policy to buy an automobile, or to buy anything else.

Don't do it unless you know you will go broke without that cash.

When you consider borrowing on your policy, remember, it isn't YOUR money you are taking. It is your little children mortgaging their bread and butter. It is your wife giving it by doing days' work for some other woman.

Even if you do fail in business, your creditors cannot take your life insurance money from you or from your dear ones. That money is absolutely safe from every business wreck. And you cannot save money in any other way for your family, if your business goes on the rocks.

Think of this—when you are in desperate need of cash. Mortgage your home, if you must—but have a life insurance policy with which you are your family can pay off the mortgage.

BEEVE IS REBUKED FOR HIS CONDUCT

Mayor and Chief Are Indignant Because Cop Harassed Hungry Woman.

Mrs. Edward Johnson, with her infant and 10-year-old sister, who were harassed by Policeman Beeve Thursday night while they were searching for Mrs. Johnson's husband, who deserted them here, were returned to Chaffee this morning, after Chief of Police Hutson purchased transportation for them.

Mayor Kage and Chief Hutson were indignant yesterday when they learned that Patrolman Beeve, who found them hungry had ordered them to leave the city. Mayor Kage summoned the policeman to his office and rebuked him. Chief Hutson informed the policeman that he was paid to protect not to abuse people who had not committed an offense.

When Chief Hutson learned that Mrs. Johnson was here penniless, he made a personal investigation. He gave the deserted woman money to buy food. Her 10-months old baby was ill from lack of something to eat and charitably inclined people gave the mother money with which to buy medicine.

W. W. Hinchey, the Broadway merchant, made especial inquiry about the deserted family and volunteered to supply them with both food and clothing. Mr. Hinchey deplored the offensive attitude of the policeman.

PLOW HORSES RUNOVER AUTO

Charles Black, Observing Speed Laws, Hit By Nags.

Charles Black in his efforts to observe the ordinance regulating the speeding of automobiles, while motoring down Broadway yesterday afternoon, permitted a farmer driving a team of plow horses to overtake him and jam the rear of his machine.

Mr. Black said that he saw the team trotting down the hill behind him, and in order to prevent them from running into him, he turned South on Main street.

He said that the farmer made no effort to drive around him but persistently followed directly behind him, until finally the horses climbed into the back of the car and the end of the wagon tongue poked the careful chauffeur in the small of the back, causing him to remonstrate with the farmer and insist on the instant removal of the team from his automobile.

Mr. Black was not injured although his suspender snapped when the wagon tongue connected with his lumber region.

The car was put out of commission and was hauled back to the garage for repairs. The teamster suffered no damage whatever, and drove away without divulging his name.

DAIRY CATTLE IN GOOD HEALTH OFFICER FINDS

H. C. Tuck, States Veterinarian, Examines 75 Cows, But Finds no Disease.

URGES DAIRYMEN TO TEST THEIR CATTLE

Official Explains to Milkmen How to Get Serum for Examinations.

Deputy State Veterinarian H. C. Tuck, of Columbia, Mo., arrived in this city Tuesday morning, where he came at the request of a number of local dairymen who desired to have their herds tested for tuberculosis.

He took up his work soon after his arrival, and yesterday afternoon completed the task, having examined seven herds in which were a total of about 75 head of cattle.

In announcing his report to the Tribune last evening, Dr. Tuck said:

"I have tested the herds of Willis Martin, S. E. Collins, C. H. Haman, Aug. Haman, W. J. Hitt, R. M. Pickens and B. D. Stevens, about 75 in all.

"There was not the slightest suspect in the entire bunch. They were all native cattle and we do not expect to find such trouble except in cattle that have been brought in or native cattle that have been exposed to cattle that were shipped in.

"When these tests are desired by dairymen, application should be made to the State veterinarian or to the secretary of the State Board of Agriculture at Columbia, Mo. We make all tests free of charge, and as near as we can, we test for everybody making application. We try to economize on railroad fare and get them bunched as much as possible, and wait until a number in the neighborhood desire the service.

"We make the tests free of charge and if there are any diseased animals the State pays for them.

"When we go to make the test we use the Intradermal Tuberculin Test and in giving the tests we are compelled to make two trips. We make an injection into the skin of three or four drops of tuberculin and then we go back in 48 to 72 hours to see the result, and it was only this afternoon that I completed my second round. When an animal has tuberculosis there is a swelling in the skin at the point of injection.

This is a new test and one that only a few of the States are using. Missouri was the first to adopt it officially. We have been using it since 1911. It is a rather complicated test but we like it better, because it is accurate and much more easy to apply.

"We also look out for any other diseases, contagious, especially, which might be dangerous to the animals of the herd or which might make the animal unfit to use for milking purposes.

"We have tags furnished by the Missouri Board of Agriculture and we place the tags in the ear of every animal we test, and keep a record of it by the number on the tag, so that if any man sells an animal he can write to the office and we can furnish him a health certificate from our record, or tell him who owned the cow at the time she was tested and give him some history as to where she came from.

"Where the herd tests sound, we issue a health certificate giving the number of cows in his herd and the several tag numbers.

"If we find diseased animals in the herd they are taken out and another test is made within 90 days to see that none of the other animals have contracted the disease.

"As soon as the condemned animals are killed the State pays for them. The price to be paid for the condemned ones is set by three appraisers appointed by the County Court, and the law allows them to appraise grade animals at not more than $40 per head, and registered pure bred animals at not more than $200 per head.

"In addition, we give the owner a shipping permit and allow him to ship these cattle to be sold for immediate slaughter, subject to government inspection. They are subjected then to a most rigid port mortem examination by the U. S. Meat Inspector, and if under their rules for meat inspection, the carcass is considered fit for food, it is stamped, inspected and passed for use as food. But they are only passed for food in cases where the lesions are very slight, possibly one or two glands which do not render the carcass unfit for food and are considered harmless.

"If the lesions are found to be such that the carcass is not fit for food, it is condemned and the owner is allowed whatever the carcass is worth for fertilizer. In this way the loss to the owner is usually not very great, and is much better than having an animal with tuberculosis in his herd.

ALLIANCE TO HOLD BIG PICNIC SUNDAY

Many Politicians Invited to Address German-Americans at Old Fair Grounds.

The German-American Alliance yesterday decided to hold its big picnic next Sunday, June 20, at the Old Fair Grounds about two miles west of the city.

Barbecued meat will be served to all who attend, and there will be many entertainment features intended to please the crowd. Capt. H. W. Bridges and Charles Hitt, who are members of the picnic committee, announced yesterday that all the aspirants for Governor on the Republican and Democratic tickets had been invited to attend the picnic and address the gathering.

Two gardeners will be asked to attend. Col. Fred D. Gardner, author of the State Land Bank Law, has been invited. He is a Democrat while A. E. L. Gardner, of St. Louis County, is a Republican aspirant. John T. Barker, John M. Adkinson, William Painter, John Gordon and Cornelius Roach are the other Democrats who are to run for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination next year.

Other Republicans who would like to succeed Gov. Major are Judge Henry Lamm and John Kennish. Both of them will be asked to attend the picnic next Sunday.

The Schuchert Concert band will probably be contracted for, Mr. Hitt stated. The Pochontas band has offered its services gratis, and will be accepted, Mr. Hitt said. It is his plan to have the Schuchert band also.

"We are going to make it one of the biggest events held in the county in years," said Mr. Hitt. "We have received notices from many of the political speakers that they will be present. This picnic will not favor any of the candidates, but will offer all of them an opportunity to address us." It is quite likely that some of them will discuss the European war, which will be interesting to our members and their guests.

J. W. and Allen Baldrige of New Madrid visited friends in this city yesterday.

for fertilizer. In this way the loss to the owner is usually not very great, and is much better than having an animal with tuberculosis in his herd.

"These dairymen who have taken this step should be commended for their action, and it should serve to encourage others in doing the same.

"There is comparatively little tuberculosis among the cattle in this State, and of the 19,334 head examined last year there was condemned but about 350 head.

"Thus far there has been more condemned this year in proportion to the number tested, and a few days ago there had already been condemned 279 head.

"A short time ago Dr. D. F. Lucky, State Veterinarian, was requested by a physician in Webster Groves to make a dairy test. The doctor stated that he had eight cases of tuberculin children and that these children were using the milk from one dairy, and after persuading the dairyman to have the herd tested Dr. Lucky and I went down and tested the herd, and condemned 42 head out of 114. We followed them up to post mortem and the owner went along and saw them killed. All of them had tuberculosis and the State paid $1800 for his loss. That is the greatest number we have ever found in one herd.

"The dairy products marketed in this city should be inspected, and if the city does not wish to maintain the office of dairy inspector, the pure food and dairy commissioner, Mr. Fricke, of St. Louis, will assist in looking after the sanitary conditions of the dairy, and our department will make the tuberculin test one time free of charge.

"Dr. Lucky's policy at the present time is to make about two official tests every six years, and then have the dairymen make tests at their own expense once or twice between our tests. We like to co-operate with local veterinarians and show them about the method of testing, but it is Dr. Lucky's policy for us to make the first rounds ourselves.

"Dr. Lucky contemplates taking up chautauqua work during the summer, and plans coming here in the near future to deliver his lecture, the subject of which is 'Three Years Among Tuberculosis Cattle and Men.' The lecture will be illustrated with pictures showing the difference between varying healthy organs and those infected with tuberculosis.

"I have completed my work here and expect to leave tomorrow afternoon for Lebanon, where I have been requested to examine a herd of sheep and make tests for scab. From Lebanon I will go to Columbia."

"If the lesions are found to be such that the carcass is not fit for food, it is condemned and the owner is allowed whatever the carcass is worth for fertilizer. In this way the loss to the owner is usually not very great, and is much better than having an animal with tuberculosis in his herd.
