Silk Velour and Plush Coats of Extreme Richness

There's a staunch elegance about silk velour that makes it a prime favorite with women who demand dressy coats that shall be both warm and stylish for street service and of a warmth to resist the severest days of winter. Many prefer velour coats because of the lighter weight. Trimmings with collars of opossum, raccoon, mink, wolf, and other furs that can be worn as suitably and costly as one can wish. Particular interest attaches to every velour coat in our stock by reason of the special processing undergone before sewing up, every piece having been specially treated by hand (not machinery) with live steam and fine brushes, to add life and luster to the pile and to make it capable of greater resistance to weather and wear.

GOING BEYOND THE LIMIT

"There is talk among leaders in congress in favor of asking an official inquiry into the actual condition of the president," says a Washington dispatch.

This agitation, it appears, started from a report sent out by Senator Moses of New Hampshire to the effect that Dr. Grayson, the president's physician, is inclined to minimize the serious nature of the president's illness, and that it is believed that President Wilson is the victim of brain lesion that will "permanently incapacitate him for official duty, even if his life is spared."

Until yesterday (Tuesday), Dr. Grayson officially ignored such reports, and dismissed the subject by referring inquirers to his daily bulletins. But, so persistently has this petty partisan gossip become that Dr. Grayson, at last, has come out with a denial—or, at least a positive statement which is tantamount to denial.

How does Senator Moses know that President Wilson has brain lesion?

How could he know, even if he were to be admitted to the sick man's presence, for, as Dr. Grayson explains, Senator Moses is not skilled as a physician.

And what right has Senator Moses and his co-gossippers to question the veracity of official reports made by Dr. Grayson?

Dr. Grayson frankly admits that the president is not yet well enough to run the risk of returning to his work, but, he adds, "if some grave emergency were to arise, I would reluctantly give my consent for the president to take whatever action might be required." This alone should be enough to set at rest the story that "the president is permanently incapacitated."

But isn't it the very essence of pettiness for members of Congress thus to harass the president when he is ill?—Kansas City Post.

FEDERAL JUDGE FARIS

While St. Louisans generally had hoped that the successor to Judge Dyer would be a resident of this city, satisfaction will be expressed with the appointment of Charles B. Faris to fill the important post. He leaves the Supreme Bench of the State to accept the new position.

As a lawyer and jurist, Judge Faris has made an excellent record. The season in which his colleagues in Jefferson City held him may be gauged by the fact that all of the members of the Supreme Bench asked President Wilson that he be appointed.

When Robert F. Walker made a special trip to Washington to present arguments for his selection, Judge Faris came to a head in a contest that has always been mentioned.

His appointment is a great honor to the city and to the State.

certain of burial are consuming more time. Not even a poor excuse can be offered for continuing the delay, and there are a world of reasons why the Senate should finish the job and get at the rest of its work.—St. Louis Republic.

Cincinnati Reds World's Champions

By beating the Chicago White Sox, champions of the American league, at Chicago, Thursday afternoon, the Cincinnati Reds became the champions of the world.

Total attendance for the eight games played 236,928. Receipts, 722,414. Each player of the Cincinnati team will receive $5,207.01 for his eight days' work, while the White Sox players must get through the winter somehow with $3,254.36, in addition to their regular salary.

The four umpires who worked in the series, were paid $1,000 each and all expenses, but they are asking for another thousand each, claiming that $125 per day is not enough for such strenuous work.

Before the games there was hardly a base ball "expert" who gave the Reds a look in for the championship, and since their dope went wrong they have been busily engaged in hunting up alibis. Many of them more than hint that the Sox players were bought off. Some say that they were outlucked, and others say it was a case of overconfidence, but the scores seem to indicate that they were simply up against a faster aggregation of ball players and that tells the whole story.
