THE CONFEDERATE MONUMENT.

Last Tuesday the monument to the Second Tennessee Infantry, Bate's regiment, was unveiled on Shiloh battlefield. During the past year a large number of monuments have been erected in the Southland to the heroes of the Confederacy and within the last few months the Jefferson Davis Monument Fund has been completed. For this the Daughters of the Confederacy have labored long and lovingly and when it is placed in Richmond, not only the South, but the Nation will feel a pride therein.

We are great just in proportion to the respect and veneration we show for the heroes of our land, and when love of the brave, the ideal and the heroic dies in the heart of the Nation then is the glory of that people altogether a thing of the past.

An effort is being made to build a memorial to the Confederate dead of Lowndes county which will be placed in Columbus, the county seat.

The movement has met with encouragement and already a measure of success. This town is conceded by everybody to be the best and most progressive in the State. In it we would build a monument that would adorn and beautify it and commemorate in a fitting way the grand and spotless record of the Lowndes county soldiers. Interest and aid are essential. Without them we can do nothing. It is to be built by the people. It will belong to the people. It is but right that each citizen give it his personal support. The work was started with a view of placing the monument at the intersection of Main and Market streets but a good many have suggested the city park as a more suitable place. The Bradford square would be an ideal situation for the monument if the city owned it but at present it is merely leased. This will, however, be settled at some future date in the most satisfactory manner possible. For the present the most important thing is to collect the funds. Every contribution, no matter how small, helps. Amounts can be placed in the small banks which are in all the drug stores or sent to any member of the board of trustees. Three persons are willing to give $500.00 if ten can be found. Who will be the fourth?

THE FEVER SITUATION

The outbreak of fever at Natchez and other points should not alarm the people or cause them to lose their heads. With the knowledge of the fever suppressed for sixty days in New Orleans and free intercourse between that city and the South, the marvel is that it has not appeared in other localities. In truth, yellow fever has lost its horrors for the South and the whole country. The time for epidemics like that of 1878 has passed and science has found a weapon with which to control the disease. When this fact is universally recognized and people co-operate with the officers in dealing with the scourge yellow fever will occasion no alarm.

The present outbreak is not one to alarm the people. Although the death rate of an epidemic cannot be determined until it has ended, it is low enough in the present instance as to give those afflicted little concern. Up to date it has been about eleven per cent. and while, with the approach of the fall months it will probably increase, its percentage will not be so high as in former outbreaks.

Truly the situation is not bad and the people should not be alarmed over it. The fever has another month and a half to run before the frost will put an end to the mosquitoes but the passing of the fever this year will mark the end of the yellow fever epidemics for the South.

Atlanta's mayor, Jas. G. Woodward, has again distinguished himself. He has committed this feat several times before but the place was in his home town and home folks are wont to overlook and forgive. This time Mayor Woodward selected Toledo, Ohio, for his exhibition. Sent to that city as a delegate to the meeting of the League of American Municipalities, representing the "Gateway of the South," as Atlanta is being advertised in these yellow fever times, he elected to make a speech on the question of municipal ownership. He fortified himself for his task by very comfortably filling up on mint juleps, high balls and other combinations which hardly a Kentuckian can resist much less a Georgian, and selected an opportune time for his grand entree, just after Mayor Dunne, of Chicago, had finished a very exhaustive study of the municipal question. Woodward managed to get upon the platform and as that edifice covered quite an area he had room to keep his feet during his tirade. He denounced everything, said he knew more about municipal ownership than Tom Johnson or Dunne, said that he owned Atlanta and many other equally ridiculous and silly things. He finally became so violent and boisterous that the delegates left, leaving the Atlanta man sawing the air to empty benches. He broke up the meeting. There is talk of impeachment in Atlanta, but it will amount to nothing. Atlanta must have her sensations and why not have the Mayor furnish one occasionally.

Greenwood has quarantined Birmingham, not because there is any yellow fever in the Magic City, but because it is alleged that physicians or irresponsible officers have made a practice of selling health certificates indiscriminately. The same reason has caused Columbus to draw the line tighter in its dealing with the health authorities of Georgia. In several instances it is reported that people have come from the Georgia capital to Columbus upon certificates, which certified nothing, and it has been made necessary to have all certificates official from the Atlanta town. Just upon what information the Greenwood citizens are acting we do not know but if health certificates are sold without regard to reason in Birmingham, it will be well for the people of Columbus to interpose additional protective precautions.

There is no yellow fever in Memphis. To settle the many alarming and misleading reports which have been circulated over the State for the past ten days, the Governor and Dr. Hunter, president of the State Board of Health, visited that city last Sunday and spent several hours in what was supposed to be the fever district, interviewing the people and making a rigid personal investigation. When they had finished they had a lengthy conference with the Memphis health officials which confirmed what they had found out and both issued cards that there was no fever in Memphis. This statement is accepted without reservation to Mississippians.

While the country has accepted the estimate that the President is a strenuous and aggressive man, eager and ready for a fight or fray, it is pleasing to contemplate the other side of his character, that is the side which makes for peace. In all of the negotiations for peace at Portsmouth the president's personality has been recognized and in every emergency presented he has been equal to it with rare diplomacy, fine tact and unlimited resourcefulness. The conference will give the country a new estimate of the man and will serve to place him in the category of great men where he belongs.

The Clarion-Ledger announces that it will soon begin to issue a morning edition of its paper. This would give the Capital a morning and an afternoon paper, something which would be appreciated by the patrons of the Jackson press.

Vardman's card about Memphis was better than Atlanta's page ad about that city. The people know that their Governor would not mislead them in an important crisis like this.

Mobile has put herself in Havana's class and is now quarantining against everything.
