ness, by seriously considering laws to correct the evil of which complaint is made. Some of these will make an honest effort to give to the farmer the same consideration that has long been shown others.

The source from which opposition has sprung, should readily convince fair-minded people that it was a fair and just solution of an inequality that was richly deserving of equalization.

No argument has been advanced against it that has not been met with a fair and convincing reply.

But what are the farmers doing about it? Are they interested? Hundreds of letters come to State Department of Agriculture commending the suggestion, but are you talking it to your neighbors?

It is now time for the farmers themselves to begin agitating the matter. Talk it to your neighbor. Write an article to your home newspaper. Get the people sufficiently interested to seek information, and then be prepared to give it to them.

Did you write for the publications cited last month? If not, get the address and do it now. Be ready to meet the argument that may be advanced against it.

Ignore ridicule, sarcasm and abuse.

These do not constitute argument, and are not worthy of consideration.

When you have justice and right on your side you are bound to be successful.—The Bulletin, Jackson, Miss.

It is nothing but right that the crap game should be surrendered to the negro. It is his rightful property, and it should not be taken from him in an unceremonious manner. If you are going to entrench upon the negro's gambling ground he should at least be notified and given time for evacuation.

Two many insignificant criminal cases are subject to appeal from magistrates' court. Delay, in the administration of justice, is dangerous. Many a criminal has gone unwhipped because of the slow process of the law. We are making anarchists by temporizing with crime—dealing tenderly with offenses. Our sympathy frequently outruns our judgment.

Lookout! When you think you are in position to receive the glad hand for something that has delighted your soul, you may be sadly fooled, for people differ very materially upon what constitutes ground for congratulation. Of course this is disheartening to a high degree, and if you do not suffer from it you will have to prepare before hand to meet it. No boy or girl expects to receive the glad hand upon the commission of crime, however insignificant that crime, but when they have done the best they can, they do not expect to be turned coldly down. See all the good there is in your children and they will make better men and women. Our country wants and needs good citizens, and they have got to come from our boys and girls.
