

LOUISVILLE, MISS.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 3, 1842.

Democratic majority in N. Carolina:—12 in the Senate; 20 in the House, giving the Democrats a majority of 32 on joint-ballot. The Whig majority on joint-ballot last year, was 38, making a Democratic gain in the "Old North State" of 70 members since the last election. The days of the political existence of Federalism are swiftly gliding to a final consummation.

We notice in the New Orleans papers, that the new crop of cotton was selling there on the 20th ult. at 7 1/2 a 7 1/2 cents.

We are pleased to see the planters of that portion of our State trading to New Orleans, taking so decided a stand against the oppressive tariff of that city, it shows that notwithstanding their pecuniary embarrassments, our farmers are determined not to submit to every tyrannical, high-handed measure that the blood-suckers of the faithless corporation of New Orleans may think proper to adopt to redeem their worthless shiplasters. We bid our agricultural friends god-speed, for we see no reason why they may not ship their cotton direct from our own State to Europe, or any other place, as well as to stop and pay their tribute to a set of swindlers in the bandit city.

A resolution was adopted, says the Mississippian, in the House of Representatives fixing upon the 22d ult. for the termination of the present session of Congress.

The above resolution was taken up in the Senate on the 15th, when a motion was made to lay it on the table; which was carried by a vote of 23 to 12. When Congress will adjourn now, we know not.

We have received the New Orleans Picayune of the 22d ult. which quotes Alabama money at 28 a 33 per cent. discount.

NEW ORLEANS BANKS.

The shavers of New Orleans, are endeavoring to make the issues of their rotten banking concerns approximate to a specie standard. The banks of Louisiana and Gass Light are quoted at par; the Mechanics and Traders Commercial, State, Union and Atehalaya at from 7 to 15 per cent. discount. Their object in this, is to purchase the present crop of cotton with their trash, and then the note holder may whistle for his money. Mississippi planters will not be caught in your trap this time gentlemen.

Mississippian.

Downright Bigamy.—A man in North Carolina, at different times, married thirteen wives, and a reward was offered for his apprehension. A person anxious to bring the monster to justice, enticed him into his house, and persuaded his wife to chat with him until he could procure a constable. When he returned, he found that the culprit had eloped with his wife. The rascal had ought to be hung.—Evening Post.

IMPORTANT DECISION.—Judge Wilkins decided on the application of John H. Ostram and others for an injunction to restrain the sale of 36,137 acres of land taxed before the patents were issued by the United States, as follows:

1st. That, although the auditor-general was the nominal party on the record, the State of Michigan was the real party, and that the court could not interfere by injunction to restrain the State in the exercise of an act of sovereignty.

2d. That a State officer, proceeding legally in the execution of a duty imposed upon him by a State law which is constitutional, cannot be restrained from executing that duty, by injunction from this court.

3d. That the State of Michigan has the right to tax lands from the time of entry, and before the patent is issued by the United States. 4th. That the complainants in this case have an ample remedy at law for any injury they might sustain, and that the court would not in such cases interfere by injunction to restrain the sale.—Detroit Free Press.

OBEDIAH BASHFUL'S FIRST AND LAST COURTSHIP.

Well I suppose I must tell you all about my courtship, I must. You must know, our old man made a great fuss about my stickin' at him round the fire cold winter nights, and said he to me one night, said he, "Well, now, Obed," (you see he always called me Obed, but my name is Obediah.) "Well, now, Obed, you jest might as well be out courtin' Deb Jones, as to be squatting down here on your hunkers, & you know, Obed, if you die unmarried, the name of Bashful will be extinct." "Well, now, father," said I, "I don't know nothin' 'bout instinct, but I can go to court Deb, for you know she dresses her hair so nice, and she's such a rotten nice gal that every feller 'bout these parts is half crazy a'ter her, there's Joe Turner and Bill Davis, and a hull squad of chaps, as wears all the new fashions, and now father, said I what would I look like, with my buckskin suit that I've wore for six years, long side some 'o their blue coats and pants, and all them are fine fixens."—but father wouldn't hear nothin' 'gainst his own opinion, and so I had to go jist to please the old man.

Deb used to go to the old white church, you know, up uncle Ephraim's lane, near the blacksmith shop, right by the orchard. Well, it wa'n't there—no, I guess it wa'n't—I wish it had been. Well, I went off dressed duration slick, I tho't; I guess I rubbed two tallow candles, there or thereabouts, into my hair, tryin' to make it curl—but I swan to man it was a mistake, there wa'n't no curl about it, a'ter all! it stuck out for all sense jist like pork-an-pine-quills, as Jim Steppers says. Well, some how or other I got myself into tolerable sick order, had on the new hat and coat I got at a raffle night afore, and off I bolted to the church, with my hands in my pockets, whistlin' Hail Columby. I felt jist as big as old Bony Part at Waterloo—I seed Deb step off of her hoss like a feather, and I runs up to speak to her, when up comes that eternal Joe Turner dressed allmity fine as if he had been up into a band-box to keep, and walks her right off from me, before I could get out. "How de dew Debby?" says I, and if I did 'nt look nation sheepish, I recon taint no matter. I blushed some too—never mind, tho' ses I, meetin' will have to break up some time or other, and Deb will have to go hum, so I went up to their house to wait for her. She did come at last, and Oh! my golly she did look screamin' nice! I felt so flustered, I did 'nt know what to say no how—at last I got out "Deb—that is I mean Debory or Debby, don't I look as my face was all over goose pimples?"—and darn my buttons, if Deb and that infernal Joe did 'nt laugh till I wished to die nearly. But we all went in, and Deb handed me a chair, but I felt so flustered I never looked where I was sittin', and down I came chawallop right on Deb's bonnet and her fixurs, and overset the chair and sprawled right over on the floor and split my new coat right down the back all open. Here was a nice pickle, but Deb pined it up, and that gave me a kind o' fection for her, and I staid to tea, but I was so flustered I spilt my tea on Joe's new pants, and he called me a darne'd awkward hog! I never said one word all the time I staid, Deb had to talk all, and I answered yes or no. She said to me, "Mr. Obed, did you ever hear a screenade?" Said I "no Miss Debby, I never heard of Sara Nade: but I know Sal Edwards," and Joe, the fool, laughed at that.—But Deb said she did 'nt mean Sara Nade, it was what the town chaps called their music, when they go out to play at nights; then she looked a kind o' slantindicular at Joe, and I think he kissed her.

But I soon saw that Deb loved Joe more than me, and I got ready to back out, Deb said, "I suppose you are going to see that Moll Mickle." "Why, said I, Debby, I recon I've got a leetle more taste for the fine arts, than go after such a looking critter as she is!"—then she looked right smart at me and said, "she always thought I was a better judge of furniture than to spark such dandies;" that tickled me like old snakes, and I ris up to make a bow for it, but somehow or other, I caught my feet together and sprawled right against her, and over-set her in Joe's lap!—She got up darned mad I tell you; says she, "Mr Obed, that is too bad—I wonder what you will do next!—but I had to laugh, I never knowed afore that Deb wore false hair, and when she fell, all her heart catchers as she used to call them, fell off, and she looked jist like a screach owl." "Why," said I, "Deb the next thing will be something else, I recon;" that made Joe laugh on my side, and I began to pluck up courage, says I, "Deb, we are going to shear our old black ram next week, and I'll send you enough wool to make you a wig!"—this ris Deb's ebenezer, she got up and made one poke at me with the shovel, but I guess it was all a mistake. I was soon on the road to hum.
