welcome, their respective tastes,—the ease and happiness of each and all, were alike consulted, and all were made to feel themselves at home. Though fixed and unwavering in his principles, yet every national pre-possession,—all moral, political and religious partialities however different from his, were tolerated beneath his roof with a licensed propriety and grace, which equally evidenced the liberality of his sentiments, and the chaste spirit of his politeness. At his board, and at his fireside, he looked and lived the character of the well bred gentleman of republican growth; blending in unaffected harmony, a highly cultivated intelligence, with the utmost simplicity of a southern planter.

In his adjudication upon the bench, he displayed a sound judgment, and with his purpose mainly bent on justice, was promptly averse to suffering the subtleties of practice, to thwart his object. As a presiding officer, his wonted courtesy was perhaps even more conspicuous than in private life. Never arrogant, petulant or presuming; he was tenacious in support of the rights and privileges of counsel at the bar,—heard patiently and respectfully the arguments of all, and ever encouraged by his kindness and amenity, the diffident and embarrassed. Fond of the legal profession, he was ardently attached to its members and cherished his associations with them, as a passionate endearment of his life. No Judge ever engaged more of the affections of the profession, and never did a Judge discharge his official functions in a manner better to deserve them.

This sketch Mr. Chairman, and greatly more is due to the character of the man whose death we now deplore. Thus much however is offered here, but as introductory to the following expression of our respectful recollection of the departed.

Resolved, That we deeply lament the death of the Hon. PETER RANDOLPH, and as a testimonial of our respect to his memory, we will wear crape on our left arm for the space of thirty days.

Resolved, That we sincerely sympathize with the family of the deceased in this afflicting dispensation of Providence, and that these expressions of our condolence, be certified to them by the Secretary of this meeting.

Resolved, That these proceedings be signed by the Chairman and Secretary, and published in the "Southern Planter," of Wilkinson, and the "Natchez," of Adams county.

On motion of Gordon D. Boyd, Esq.

Resolved, That John Henderson, Esqr., be requested to furnish a copy of his address, to be published with the foregoing resolutions.

The Edgefield Carolinian observes that the Gov. of Georgia has recently appointed twenty-two aids with the rank of Lt. Colonel. Military titles are so common throughout the country that Mister, is quite a title of distinction to a well dressed gentleman.

The "Natchez," with still only "a warrant officer on the quarter deck, has provoked a fire from two Frigates of the first class."—The Planter of Woodville, and Correspondent of Port Gibson, have both sent a double shot into the deck of the poor "uncommissioned ship." Better signal the Captain to come on board and take command, Billy?—If they fire broadsides, your masts will go by the board at least; if they dont sink you.

We have the pleasure of acknowledging the reception of the first number of a new paper printed at Woodville in this State, called the "SOUTHERN PLANTER." It promises to be a valuable accession to the Public Journals of the day.

The editor of the 'Southern Planter' of the 5th instant holds the following language:

"Batchelors Nullified; seventy eight marriages have been solemnized in the county of Wilkinson within the last twelve months. Leap year commenced on Sunday last, and will prove still more fatal to the ranks of single blessedness."

If this is nullification, we like the doctrine very well, and should be glad if some of our fair friends would consent to nullify us.

Every arrival of the mail, brings additional accounts of the severity with which the winter has set in—and even in some portions of our country, south of the Tennessee river, its effects have been most fatal. In Jackson, Tenn. one of the criminals confined in the Jail of that place, was frozen to death on the night of the 17th ult. and on the following evening, a man in Haywood and a boy in Hardeman county, were also frozen to death. At Nashville, on the 21st ult. a loaded wagon crossed the Cumberland on the ice, a circumstance that has not occurred since 1796, and in the country bordering on the Lakes, the snow had fallen at several places, to the depth of from two to three feet.

MELODY.

Cease, cease my harp, thy strains forego
That speaks of former days,
Or sadly will thy numbers flow
While thither memory strays;
Reviving joys to feelings dear,
Like fairy visions past;
Alas! their blissful moments were
Too pure and bright to last.

And as the wretched lull'd to sleep,
Whose mind blest dreams pervade,
Awakes with keener grief to weep,
His life's contrasting shade;
So the dear joys and friends now past
In silence to the tomb,—
O'er brightest hours their shadows cast
And deepen present gloom!

DIED,

At his residence in Wilkinson County, at half past nine P. M. on the 30th of January, in the 58th year of his age, PETER RANDOLPH, late Judge of the District Court of the United States for the Mississippi District. Thus terminated a life of private and public usefulness and virtue.—Endowed with a good understanding, he completed his education at William and Mary College, where he enjoyed the society and intimate friendship of Chapman Johnston, B. W. Leigh, and many other of the first young men of that period who have since risen to distinction, among whom he was distinguished for chivalrous generosity and loftiness of soul. At this period the only son with but one sister of a wealthy gentleman, his prospects were bright. But by an untoward event he suddenly became almost destitute of means, the only protector and support of his admirable mother. His firm decision, respectful tender filial deportment on this trying occasion, was honored and admired by an enlightened and sympathising community. After affording to his affected mother every solace and comfort which duty and affection could procure, he repaired to Stanton, to study law with his excellent friend Chapman Johnston. Here he became acquainted with Miss Sarah Cocke then a lovely and interesting orphan, young friendless and poor. The romantic generosity and tender humanity of his soul, first determined him to become her friend, adviser and protector, but on leaving her to pay a short visit to his affectionate mother, he discovered the true character of his feelings, and being opposed in his wish to educate her by the pride of her relations, on qualifying himself for the practice of the law they were married, and her education afterwards completed. He commenced the practice of the law about the year 1805 or 1806, then about 23 years old. Though poor in purse, rich in the esteem and affections of the people of Nottoway and adjoining counties, a zealous democrat alike from allegiance to the Constitutions of the Governments Federal and State, and a noble philanthropy and heroic love of liberty which would assert for all mankind equal rights and privileges. Business and honors sought him in rapid succession. He was early delegated by the people of Nottoway to the Legislature of Virginia, in which he repeatedly represented them; he was chosen Captain of a company of Light Infantry in 1807, in 1809 recommended by the magistrates of the County over his senior officer; he was Commissioner in Feb. 1810; Lieutenant Colonel of the 49th Regiment, and in 1812 he was elected to the Bench of the Circuit Court of Virginia. Never did any Judge enjoy in a higher degree the confidence and affections of those over whom he presided, and so punctiliously faithful was he to the trust, that it is believed, he never missed but one term of Court during nine years which he held the office, although his health was so infirm that he expectorated blood for several years, and on that occasion he had been shot through the lungs by a desperado. Forced at length by the continued ravages of disease and an unpropitious climate to abandon his native State, honored beloved and regretted by all who knew him, he resigned and emigrated to this State in 1822, and was scarcely settled when he was appointed Judge of the District Court of the United States for this District, by President Monroe. With what fidelity, ability and public satisfaction he discharged the duties of this trust is left to the Bar and the people of Mississippi to attest. But his greatest excellence was his private worth. Doubtlessly brave, of a force of character which gave its own superior impress to all minor spirits who shared his converse, generous, tender affectionate and humane, his bosom was the chosen seat, of the filial, conjugal, parental, social and charitable virtues. No man ever possessed more ardent and devoted friends, few very few so richly merited them. The widow, the orphan, the poor, the afflicted, always found in him a sympathising and efficient friend, he was an excellent neighbor, a kind and humane master. Until Aug. 1825, though he repined at his separation from all the friends of his early years, whom he loved with singular energy, he enjoyed uninterrupted happiness. His domestic circle had been blessed with health, harmony and affectionate reciprocation of all the relative duties. But in the time of rejoicing at the marriage of his eldest daughter to a gentleman whom he esteemed and loved, sickness came, and when he arose from the bed of delirium, he had lost his beloved wife. A man, the combination of the strongest elements, severed from his friends, bereft of the wife he had for more than 20 years adored, in the chaos of grief (is it to be wondered,) he lost the equipoise of his mind and his happiness was wrecked.

In November 1828 he was again married to Elizabeth Leatherbury of Natchez. And could an amiable, a faultless a dutiful wife whom he justly appreciated and tenderly loved have retrieved his happiness we had yet possessed him. But God willed it otherwise. With such exalted dignity of character he was yet human; not exempt from frailty, we mourn him—gone whither not even the unrammelled mind can accompany him. To his friends remain the interesting duty reciprocally to cultivate the friendship and promote the happiness of all whom he loved, the sad solace of his honored memory and the hope that God shall have had mercy on his soul.
