BROTHER BROWN'S VIEWS.

He wants to Dispose of the Surplus in the United States Treasury.

To the Editor of The New Farmer:

I see many propositions to dispose of the surplus in the U. S. Treasury. My plan would be to donate $10,000,000 more or less, owing to population, as a special school fund; let the principal ever remain and only use the interest on same, each State to have control of said fund. Let it be divided among the counties in proportion to educable children or population, such money to be loaned on real estate security, and only to actual settlers at a lawful per cent., and let such interest be used for school purposes only.

This plan would greatly increase the facilities for education, and would put at once $400,000,000 in circulation, or about $7 per capita.

Pass the silver bill and sub-treasury bill and we will have money plenty, and with our free school system, we, in the near future, can boast of a free America in the true sense of the word.

M. A. BROWN.

Bailey, Miss.

"The Lecturer."

Owing to the false education of producers in regard to economical questions which touch their material interest, "The Lecturer" holds, perhaps, the most important office of our order. It being his special province to aid in the destruction of those relics of barbarism, those ancient idols whereby the many are enslaved for the benefit of the few; as also to teach the brethren the superior advantages of a currency based upon the real wealth of the nation, and made the only legal tender for debts and taxes; and to show them that their first duty to themselves, to their children to their brethren, is a true allegiance to the principles of our order, upon the success of which the prosperity of the country depends.

Now, seeing that so great a weight hangs upon this office, the organs of the order cannot do a better work for themselves or for the order than to stir up these, their most efficient aids, to the proper discharge of their official duties.—J. H. Robertson, Mt. Vinco, Va., in the National Economist.

Bill Nye on the Grippe.

Ah! the grippe! the grippe! We've sure enough had it. It needs no introduction. You will know it when it grips you. For ten days our limbs were converted into a tram road over which the locomotive of this dreadful disease passed, using our head for its bumper, finally sidetracking us at the junction of prostration, and left us feasting on Bill Nye's soothing restorative which is:

"Little grains of quinine,
Little drinks of rye,
Make lagrippe that's got you
Drop its hold and fly.
This may quickly help you,
If you'll only try;
But don't forget the quinine
When you take the rye."

To the Editor of The New Farmer:

In reply to J. H. McGehee I will agree with him in some of his selections for delegates from the State at large, but I ask him, and all good citizens to pick out good clean men from all classes whose past reputation is without blemish and select no man who has sold his birth-right for a mess of porridge. It has been said that if we are not careful in our selections the Louisiana State Lottery will be moved to Mississippi. The love of money is the root of all evil.

F. M. WALKER.

Topisaw, Miss.

Brother Rayner's Appeal.

To the Editor of The New Farmer:

I am a subscriber to our paper. The reason I say "our" is that I think every alliance man ought to take it, as well as every laboring man in the State, for it is advocating his cause and trying to help build him up. If we do not read our own literature, how can we expect to be able to secure our rights? Put your shoulder to the wheel and keep pushing. We must know what is going on, and what paper can we rely on so well as our own?

There is a great deal of talk about the convention. I hope we will get none but good people to represent us, and I trust we may never regret changing the old Constitution.

R. J. RAYNER.

New Albany, Miss.

The victims of tight lacing furnish striking examples of wasted lives.—Washington Post.

Political Economy.—"Never buy any more votes than you absolutely need."—Washington Post.

"That is a speaking likeness of your wife, Garrill."

"It couldn't be any kind of a likeness if it wasn't."—N. Y. Sun.

Tom Tucker—Why is a kiss like a sermon?

Jack Horner—Because it requires two heads and an application.—Boston Herald.

On a tomb in a Blairville, Pa., cemetery may be read this curious epitaph: "A. B. — was a good son, a loving husband, a fond father, an able lawyer, but an honest man."

Smart Pupil—You say there is hair on all parts of the human body. Now, is there any on the heart?

Professor—Yes, a kind of a down. You must have seen people who were downhearted.—N. Y. Herald.

Mrs. John McWilliams, a Nebraska wife, petitions the court to restrain her lawful husband "from patting her on the head, poking her in the ribs and talking baby talk to her."

Women as a rule are behind the age. Of course it is not necessary to mention whose age. They fail to mention it themselves, and in this they certainly don't claim even as much as they are entitled to.

Why should not the Government loan to Farmers?

On the subject of loans to farmers by the national Government, Lecturer Mortimer Whitehead of the National Grange says: How many hundreds of millions of dollars has our government loaned to another class "of the people" to help them build railroads that are now too often used to oppress the farmers?

It simply makes a difference who is doing it. U. S. Senator Stanford, of California, has within a few days introduced this matter in the Senate, and the world moves and farmers are awaking and commencing to move with it.

"All citizens shall be equal before the law," says our National Constitution, and that means finance laws, tariff laws, and all laws. Let us think on these things.

To this the Prairie Farmer of Chicago replies: "The Prairie Farmer asserts, on broad grounds, that the government should not go into the business of loaning money at all; certainly not to one class to the exclusion of others."

We should like to have an explanation from the P. F. on two points: why should not the government loan money; and if it loans to those who invest their money in bonds why should it not loan to those who have their means invested in land?

The custom of all organized governments is to take charge of the whole scheme of finance. It issues the money and controls and regulates it in all regards, permitting no individual to have anything to do with it, and since it so controls and regulates, and can make or mar individual fortunes according as it expands or contracts the currency, why should it not assume the further function of loaning, and thus put itself in a position to afford relief to those who are liable to suffer loss from the government manipulation of the national finances?

As to not loaning money to one class to the exclusion of another, that is just what this government has been doing for a quarter of a century, and now we want to see the other class have a show. But even if the government's loaning of money was confined to one class, and that class the farmers who own their own farms, such a system would result in great benefit, because upon the prosperity of the farmers depends that of every other class. If farmers have plenty of money every other business in the country, even that of banking, flourishes. No sane man ought to be opposed to such "class legislation," if it may be so called, as would redound to the general good.—Ex.

How often we have heard our friends say they would give that amount if they only had a photo of some deceased relative. Don't put it off any longer. Go right down to S. B. Terry's studio, south end Front Row, and have yours taken.

THREE-YEAR-OLD'S IDEA OF KISSES.

I showered upon his dimpled cheeks
Sly kisses by the score,
Then hugged my darling to my heart,
And stole some twenty more.
He did not murmur or oppose,
But still and passive laid;
In thoughtful mood he asked me then:
"Of what are kisses made?"
"I cannot tell you, precious one,
Just make a few yourself,
Perhaps you then can answer, dear.
Your query, you sweet elf."
Up came two ruby, rosy lips,
On neck, and cheek, and brow,
He made some kisses: then said I,
"Ah, can't you answer now?"
With thoughtful men and winning smile,
He turned his eyes above,
Then said: "Why, mamma dear, I think,
They're made, just made of love."

Roping a Big Wolf.

Young Capt. Nels Valleaux, a youth between 15 and 16 years of age, performed a feat that stands unrivaled in the history of prairie exploits. Mounted on his trusty and sure footed Montana horse he essayed to capture the larriat an immense gray wolf. Twice the beast's neck was encircled by the rawhide lariat and twice the animal's sharp teeth severed the strands as the young horseman was attempting to disable the savage beast. The third time Nels caught the young wolf around the middle of the body and started on a run, dragging it near the edge of a cut bank until he tumbled it over the edge. Nels then held the wolf suspended in the air over the edge of the cut bank by fastening the rope to the pommel of the saddle. He then dismounted and stoned the animal to death, the well trained horse standing perfectly still during the operation.—Fort Benton Press.

Common Salt for Neuralgia.

It is not generally known that common salt is an admirable remedy for neuralgia. Dr. George Leslie gives details of thirty or forty cases of facial and other neuralgias, odontalgia, etc., which have been cured, in most instances instantaneously, by the insufflation of common salt. The salt was either "snuffed" or blown up the nostrils. He said he had been unsuccessful in only two cases; both of these were cases of old standing, which had been treated frequently by morphine injections.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Judas Was Politic.

The Armenians, who believe hell and limbo to be the same place, say Judas, after having betrayed the Lord, resolved to hang himself because he knew that Christ was to go to limbo and deliver all the souls that he found there. He thought by killing himself to get to limbo in time to be released with the other wrong doers, but the devil, knowing his intent, held him over limbo until the Lord had passed through, and let him fall into the abyss (hell) below.—St. Louis Republic.

An Everlasting Book.

The most singular material for book-making is proposed by Professor Castagnatta, and partially carried out by Professor Burkham, of Brunswick. His idea was to make a book indestructible by printing in gold or silver letters upon thin leaves of asbestos, the binding to be of a thicker sheet of asbestos. Neither time nor fire could have any effect upon a volume of this kind, and it might well merit the title of "the book of eternity."—New York Telegram.

English People Changing Color.

There is no question that the English people, as a whole, are darkening fast. This is due to the influence of town life. In country districts "lint white" children succeed to lint white parents; but they drift more and more to the great centers, where in the second generation they become brown and in the third or fourth develop those mongrel hues which distinguish a city population. And this means that they deteriorate.—St. James Gazette.

Chapped Hands and Lips.

Chapped hands and lips are a common complaint. The best preparation I ever found for the hands is: Three ounces of lemon juice, three ounces of white wine vinegar and one-half pint of white brandy. For the lips: Oil of roses, four ounces; one ounce white wax, and of spermaceti one-half an ounce. Melt in a glass vessel and stir with a wooden spoon. Pour into a china cup or glass.—M. E. Cowin's Letter.

Proof by Flowers.

"If every human being in the American continent were to be taken out of existence," said the late Professor Asa Gray, "and the whole work of his hands were cleared away, so that no trace remained, subsequent historians could prove that the Caucasian race existed by the flowers that would be found growing here."—Chicago Times.

What Prompted Her.

Rev. Dr. Primrose—God will reward your having deterred your husband from fighting that duel. It was a true Christian act.

Mrs. Sainly—Yes, my husband is an awful bad shot.—Epoch.

A Brute.

"This bread of yours, my dear, is a contradiction of the laws of gravity."

"Indeed?"

"Yes. It's as heavy as lead, but it won't go down."—Chatter.
