Rankin Defends the State.

Washington, April 15—During the discussion today in the House of the navy personnel Representative Rankin of Mississippi and Lineberger of California, locked horns again over the number of enlisted men contributed by their respective states to the World War.

Mr. Rankin, "In reply to the gentleman from California, I desire to say that when I stated that I might offset his 50,000 ex-service men in California who he says, are in favor of the largest personnel for the navy with something like 100,000 from Mississippi who are in favor of economy in naval and military expenditures, I did not state that all those men from Mississippi were members of the American Legion. An ex-service man has the same right and the same voice in public affairs, whether he is a member of the American Legion or not. He tells you that Mississippi furnished about 68,000 men during the war and that therefore my figures were exaggerated, but he overlooked the fact that thousands of ex-service men have moved to Mississippi since the war closed.

"We had two training camps in that state, Camp Shelby, at Hattiesburg, and Payne Field at West Point, and when those boys from other sections of the country came there and saw what a wonderful country we have and what great prospects are there, they flocked back to Mississippi after the war by the thousands.

"And if my distinguished friend from California had the privilege, the pleasure and the honor of training in Mississippi for the gallant services which he rendered overseas, especially if he had been a single man, no doubt today instead of wasting his time trying to convince this House of the proposition for which he stands, or of tantalizing himself with the prospects of going to the senate, he would be down there in Mississippi cultivating his cotton fields or mowing his alfalfa and singing, 'Praise God From Whom all Blessings Flow.'"

REPORT OIL IS BROUGHT IN NEAR CHARLESTON

Charleston, Miss., April 21.—Reports that oil has been struck in the oil well recently started at Teasdale, near here, caused much excitement in this vicinity Thursday. O. R. B. Pace, superintendent in charge, said that oil had been struck, but he did not know how much. Mr. Pace said that oil bearing sands had been encountered at an approximate depth of 560 feet. A rock which he thinks was the cap rock, was met at 450 feet, then came a strata of brown shale and then, according to Mr. Pace, the drill entered oil.

CRIMSON CLOVER IN MONROE COUNTY

While over in the Amory and Smithville territory Monday I visited the farms of Mr. Jim Allen and Kelly Davis, and on both farms crimson clover was being plowed under that was over knee high and as thick as could grow. Probably 25 or 30 acres of clover was growing on each farm, and I will say that if anybody can find a crop that looks better than a field of crimson clover in full bloom, I would like to see it. Mr. Allen and Mr. Davis have been growing this clover for several years now, so of course have rich land and every year their farms are becoming richer and richer. The clover that is being turned under on these farms will add as much fertilizer to the land as could be gotten from fifteen or more sacks of cotton seed meal.

I heard Mr. Geo. R. James make this statement, and it is a fact worth remembering: As the soil is so rich we will have wealthy people, and if the soil is poor we will have poor people. It does not matter how intelligent a farmer may be or how hard he works or saves, he has no chance of making anything except a hard living on poor soil.

SOME CROPS TO PLANT NOW.

Every farmer in the county has plenty of time to get seed and plant a crop of velvet beans, soy beans or peas to furnish feed and some fertile land to plant another year.

There are thousands of acres of loam land in this county that should be planted in velvet beans to furnish some feed for the cattle in the winter time, but there has not been enough of these beans bought in Monroe county to plant over 600 acres.

Most farmers say that they will not plant velvet beans because they cover the corn, but I think that when corn will not make over 15 bushels per acre and often less than 15 bushels, it should be covered with something to hide the poor soil.

A peck of soy beans or velvet beans cost very little; this amount is sufficient to plant with an acre of corn, so why not get a few pecks to grow with your corn and produce twice as much feed on every acre of land.

Patrol Your Land.

The supreme court of the United States holds that where a still is found on one's land the landowner is prima facie guilty and may be convicted without further testimony. This decision makes it very hazardous for land owners to allow whiskey to be made on their land. It not only subjects them to indictment and conviction, but carries with it a forfeiture of the land on which illicit stills are operated.—Hinds County Gazette.
