School Concert.

Last Friday night it was our turn to attend the entertainment given by the pupils of Mrs. Richard's school and Mrs. Sewell's music class, at Military Hall.

By half past eight o'clock the spacious hall was well filled, when the evening's exercises were opened with a duet (Prometheus), on the grand piano, by Mrs. Sewell and Miss Annie Dowd.

Next in order was the "Graces," in their bespangled, light and airy costumes, well calculated to make one almost wish he were an angel.

Recitations were had by the little fellows as follows, some of which were "funny," while others were freighted with moral precept:

"The little orator," by Johnnie Simpson; "Baby's trials," by Mabel Tschudi; "Boys' rights," by Reuben Davis; "Nose out of joint," by Mary B. Burns; "A chip of the old block," by little Charlie Strong; "Johnnie's opinion of Grandmother's," by John Baxter McFarland; and "The tired soldier," by Seymour Waterman.

The two little Misses, May Elkin and Maggie Tschudi, each played a duet with their instructor in music, Mrs. Sewell, evincing musical talent far in advance of their years.

Four choruses were sung by the vocal class—"Ocean nymphs," "Mother, I have heard," "Distant Chimes," and "Away to the woods," which betrayed vocal talent as well as thorough training.

Four instrumental solos were performed by the more advanced pupils of Mrs. Sewell, which were really the cream of the evening's entertainment—"Sonatine," by Miss Bettie Holmes; "Danse Feerique," by Miss Nellie Holmes; "Galop de Concert," by Miss Laura Bear; and "Polacca," by Miss Annie Dowd.

The instrumental solo—"Valse Caprice,"—by Mrs. Sewell, was a triumph. The piece was persistently encored—a just tribute to her musical talent and standing.

The "String of proverbs," by Misses Emma Bristow and M. W. Hodges, was amusing and well received.

"The sewing society," dialogue, by several young Misses in their teens, and in their mamma's dresses, was not only "funny" but mirrored too much truth of many societies of the present day—the ostensible brightening of the beatless condition, and the actual blackening of home character and life.

Misses M. W. Hodges and Minnie Henderson, gave us Krug's Polonaise duet—an excellent piece of music, well played.

"Elixir of Love," by H. J. Richard and vocal class, was good—little Charlie Strong bearing off the palm.

The children all enjoyed "Mother Goose," by the juvenile class.

There were many little pleasing incidents connected with the evening we would be glad to mention, but space forbids.

The affair was highly creditable to Mrs. Richard and Mrs. Sewell, and was commended with the presence of one of the most orderly audiences it has been our pleasure to witness in many years.

CHANGE OF PLACE.

Ed. D. Pierce & Co., Successors to Pelrose Bros, Photographers, finding it necessary to have more room in order to accommodate their growing business, and to increase their facilities for working to the best advantage, and the accessibility to their elegant gallery, have taken the splendid first floor store, formerly Geo. Elkin's drug store, two doors east of the Postoffice, where they will also keep in connection with their gallery a stock of Choice Pictures, Frames Mountings, Picture cord, etc., all of which will be sold at very low figures. Pictures of all kinds framed at short notice and in good style. Copying and Enlarging old pictures a specialty.

The closing exercises of the Aberdeen colored free School were held during Thursday, Friday and Friday night of last week. We did not attend, but understand that everything passed off in an orderly manner. The intelligence and manifested advancement of the pupils reflected great credit upon J. P. Sims, Principal, and his assistants. J. P. Sims is native of Mississippi born, a former slave, and has, by dint of industry, morality, and a superior intelligence, accomplished a greater than fair education, and a position for sobriety, respectability and worth, among his people not excelled, if equaled in our State.
