KOZEE KORNER

By Madame Parmele.

"Why does a girl close her eyes when she is kissed?" This question may seem at first glance to be trivial and wholly insubordinate to the calm deliberation of scholarly minds, but in reality it is commanding the attention of psychologists in the world's leading universities. Exhaustive experiments are being conducted by eminent scientists in Berlin and throughout France and many and varied are the theories that have been offered. We will not report any conclusions at this time but rather would encourage original research in this field. It is possible that some "philosopher of the hills" will, by careful pervigilation and reasoning, collect data that will go far toward elucidating this seemingly contradictory mental status.

To this end The Eagle offers a year's subscription to the person, married or single, who will send in the best answer to the question: "Why does a girl close her eyes when she is kissed?" All answers must be in the hands of the editor of the Kozzy Korner by Sept. 5th. Prof. Corky Howell, of Hamburger, will be judge of the contest.

In the above mentioned contest Dad Lucas, Big Kid Dague and Editor Dahl are barred on the grounds of professionalism.

Ed Flasted is suffering from a felon, or a belt pin rick, or something else like that on his left hand. Ed should learn to drive from the left for a change.

Petty bought a race horse last week. He evidently expects competition on some of his moonlight runs this winter.

A Paris dispatch announces that the thing in raiment next fall and winter is to be an "eel gown" which derives its name from the fact that it is to be the same shape all the way down. Can't you hear the fleshy lady sniff when she reads this?

Matt was seen sneaking a sewing machine out to his new house Tuesday night. Us girls shouldn't feel too bad at this because maybe Matt will run it himself.

From observations taken by myself during the past few weeks it looks as if another wedding is to take place here soon.
