HER ILL LUCK.

A fashionable woman saw in a shop window a collar of pearls that she liked. She went in and sought out the shopkeeper.

"What is the price," she said, "of that pearl collar in your window?"

"One thousand dollars, ma'am," said the shopkeeper, and he drew forth the collar and displayed its beauties to the dazzling woman.

She took out her check book.

"I'll tell you what I'll do," she said, "I'll give you my check for $500, and I'll send my husband here to see the collar this afternoon. Don't tell him it is $1,000, tell him it is $500. Then maybe he will buy it for me."

The jeweler bowed and smiled. He had seen this sort of game played many a time before.

"I wish you luck, madam," he said, and the lady departed.

Her husband she found in his office in a mood unusually tractable. He had sold certain stocks at a great profit that morning. He consented readily, therefore, to go and look at the necklace.

That evening his wife dressed for dinner with unusual care. She wore her most beautiful gown. She dreamed as she dressed, of an affectionate husband clasping about her white throat a collar of pearls.

And "I bought the pearls," were the man's first words when he got home.

"You dear!" she exclaimed. "Let me see it."

"Can't," said he. "I had it sent to my mother's. You know it is her birthday tomorrow."—Exchange.
