Needed Here, Yes!
 There is a country where babies never hear harsh words. Strangely enough, it is a country where missionaries feel there is plenty of work for them to do. It is a province in southern Africa, and the people who never quarrel in the presence of their children are the Ekoi. P. A. Talbot told recently of the customs of this odd race. "The Ekoi," said he, "are devoted parents. One superstition forbids all quarrelling in the house where there are little children. The children, they say, love kind looks and gentle voices, and if these are not to be found they will close their eyes and forsake the earth until they get a chance to be reincarnated in less quarrelsome surroundings."

Slaves of the Word "If."
 Grover Cleveland once declared that he was an optimist, but not an "if-ist." "An if-ist," said Mr. Cleveland, "is a person who is a slave to the little word 'if,' whereas an optimist hopes for the best in a sane manner. The if-ist is never quite sane. I once knew an if-ist who was lost in Maine woods with a companion on a hunting expedition. As night came on they made camp, but, although they were hungry, they had shot no game and had nothing to eat. With a perfectly serious face this fellow looked at his companion and said: 'If we only had a ham, we'd have ham and eggs.' Only had some eggs!"

Criticizes Women's Clothes.
 Dr. Haig Ferguson in a lecture at the Edinburgh Royal infirmary the other day had some severe things to say about the clothing of the adult woman. It was hampered by fashion and superstition and nothing could be a greater tribute to the strong nerves and powerful muscles of women than the fact that their health had survived for centuries their habits of clothing. A woman's clothing was the despair of the hygienist. Children and girls were more sensibly clad, but when girls grew up they were often clothed in a way which made them unable to walk, run or breathe. Weighty skirts, low-necked gowns, "pneumonia blouses," the modern hat, the big-heeled shoe with its pointed toe, were all condemned. But then women will have it so, and so it will remain.—Westminster Gazette.

Oregon Man's Insect Catcher.
 In the country all sorts of homely devices are used to catch the bugs and kill them, and an Oregon man, who probably had his apple orchard overrun by some destructive species, patented a trap for the pests. A barrel has pieces cut out of the upper portion and is half filled with rotten or bruised apples or some other odoriferous fruit. On top of the barrel is placed a pan partially filled with water, oil or some poisonous liquid. From the apex of a tripod that keeps the basin from falling off the barrel hangs a lantern. In the daytime the insects will be attracted by the odor of the fruit, and in flying up to feast many of them are likely to fly into the water. At night the lantern is lighted and bugs will come from afar to flutter against it and meet their death in the liquid below.—Chicago Tribune.

Over-Confidence Only Peril.
 The only peril which now confronts the Republicans is over-confidence, and the campaign managers may be relied on to keep this feeling from getting into dangerous shape. The record which congress has made in the session which close a few days hence will furnish a striking tribute to the Republicans as a party which carry out their pledges, in spirit as well as in letter.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Hugo and Garibaldi.
 Visitors to Guernsey are sometimes able to see Hauteville, where Victor Hugo, the French poet, lived and died. In his house is a handsomely furnished room, which was specially prepared by Victor Hugo for Garibaldi, the emancipator of Italy, who had promised to be his guest. Everything which Victor Hugo thought Garibaldi would appreciate was placed in this room. But Garibaldi changed his plans and never visited Hauteville. Today the room has a pathetic interest, prepared for the guest who never came.
 Office supplies at the Democrat.

Favorite Yonkers Fire Horse.
 In Yonkers one of the fire companies in the outskirts has a horse which is a great favorite not only with the firemen, but with the neighbors. He roams at will in the vacant lots for blocks from the house, but he is on the job at the first tap of the bell, and never seems to be behind the less privileged animals which have to stay in the house. This steed gets his regular meals at home, but he is a welcome guest at all the nearby houses where there are children, and receives a good many dainties to eke out the bill of fare provided by the municipality.

Should Use Large Mirror.
 Perhaps one trouble with the rank and file of persons whom one sees wearing unbecoming styles in the streets is that they dress before small mirrors instead of taking in their own figures before long glasses. A woman who had been traveling and had been confined to the usual hotel dressing table mirror said the other day: "I had no idea how unbecoming this gown was to me until I happened to look at myself in a mirror in the corridor of the hotel. I was simply horrified. Think of my walking in the street in a skirt that kicks out at the back at every step."
