

ALL MONTANA WELCOMES HIM

PRESIDENT TAFT IS HEARTILY GREETED BY PEOPLE OF THIS STATE.

PEACE CHOSEN AS THEME

Address in Butte a Plea for Ratification of Arbitration Treaties—Short Stops Made in Bozeman, Livingston and Billings—Confers About Federal Judgeship.

Billings, Oct. 19.—The itinerary of President Taft's "supplemental tour" was completed today, and the date of his return to Washington was fixed for November 12. The original trip will end at Pittsburg, October 31. Mr. Taft will spend November 1 at Morgantown, W. Va., and from there will go to Hot Springs, Va., for five days. He will spend only one day in Cincinnati, November 7, when he will vote in the local elections in that city. From Cincinnati the president will go to Louisville, Ky., to spend November 8. He will be at Frankfort, Ky., November 9 and at Hodgenville, Ky., to attend the Lincoln Farm celebration, November 10. On November 11 Mr. Taft will pay hurried visits to Nashville, Tenn., Sewanee, Tenn., to visit the University of the South, where Major "Archie" Butt once went to school, and to Chattanooga. From the latter city Mr. Taft will go direct to Washington.

Today the president traveled across the state of Montana, his train at times running through fields of snow. The temperature at Butte this morning was below freezing, a remarkable transition in 36 hours from the sun-baked torrid deserts of Southern California and southern Nevada, where the thermometer had hovered around 100 in the shade.

The president's welcome in Montana was a non-partisan but a very cordial one. Governor Norris, a democrat, and Senator Dixon, a republican, were among the more prominent guests aboard the president's train during the day. Senator Myers, a democrat, was unable to meet the president, but sent a telegram of greeting.

The day was not entirely devoid of politics, however, for T. Arthur Marlow, the republican national committeeman for the state, Representative Pray and several other republican leaders boarded the president's train and were in conference both with Mr. Taft and Secretary Hillis. One of the subjects discussed was a successor to Federal Judge Carl Rasch, who recently resigned from the bench. There are several candidates in the field, but Mr. Taft did not indicate whom he favored. He will give considerable more time to the subject.

Judge Rasch was appointed to the district court a little more than a year ago, following his defense of former Secretary of the Interior Ballinger before the Ballinger-Pinchot investigating committee.

President Taft made two addresses in Butte, one at a breakfast tendered him by the newspaper writers, and a second at the Broadway theater. Peace was his theme at the latter place, and following his address Senator Dixon announced that he was in favor of the early ratification of the arbitration treaties with Great Britain and France. In practically every state he has visited thus far the president has received pledges of support from the senators who have heard his addresses in advocacy of the compact.

There were ten-minute stops at Three Forks, Bozeman and Livingston on the way to Billings. Here the president was entertained at dinner and made an address in the Babcock theater. Leaving here at midnight, Mr. Taft will spend Friday in Wyoming and Saturday and Monday in South Dakota.

In several of his speeches today the president referred feelingly to the death of former Senator Thomas H. Carter, of this state. "One of the troubles in getting beyond fifty," he said, "is that so many men begin to fall away from you. You think one year is the exception but it is the same the next, and then you begin to realize that you are among the eligibles yourself."

At Livingston President Taft spoke briefly about his veto of the wool and woolen bill. "I am a moderate protectionist," he said, "elected on a protection platform, and in order to maintain my pledge I was obliged to veto the bill. But there is coming in on the first of December a report on the whole subject of the wool and woolen industry, with a statement as to the difference in the cost of production in this country and abroad, and when that report comes in it will be my duty to make a recommendation to congress as to the needed changes in Schedule 'K.'"

"I understand that the question is up here whether we should tax wool in the grease or the scoured wool. I understand that the Montana wool growers favor the latter method. That question comes before the tariff board, and we shall learn from it which is the most practicable and which is the most just. When we get more information and make the recommendations, I sincerely hope that congress will act both in justice to the consumer and in justice to those who are raising wool and those who are manufacturing woolens."

The president arrived in Butte at 8:50, and left at 11:15. Much was crowded into that period, however, beginning with the breakfast to Mr. Taft at the Silver Bow club by the Butte Newswriters' union, whose guest he was while here. At the breakfast there were about 250 guests. Gov. Edwin L. Norris presided. J. H. Durston, of the Anaconda Standard, introduced the president, who, in the brief address that he gave, made no reference to politics whatever. Mr. Taft just gave a delightful, quiet talk about Montana and its great resources, about the great future it has and the great work there is to be done in the state, and how the east is looking to the west for homes for its surplus population.

Following this address, Charles F. Degerman, president of the Butte Newswriters' union, presented President Taft with the original of Charles M. Russell's famous painting, "Roping a Grizzly." This painting was secured at a cost of about $800 by a popular subscription taken up by the news-writers. Mr. Taft was clearly delighted with the splendid gift and acknowledged it in a very pretty little speech, in which he paid a fine compliment to the prowess of his predecessor, Theodore Roosevelt, as a hunter of grizzly and other big game animals. To each guest at the breakfast was presented a small copy of the picture, as well as a small copper medal, about the size of a silver dollar, on one side of which was a picture of President Taft, with some words explanatory of the occasion, and on the other the Montana state seal.

After the Russell picture had been presented to the president all the lights were turned out in the room, while a strong light was thrown on the painting, bringing out every detail with fine effect, so that all in the room could get a fine view of the work.

Leaving the Silver Bow club the presidential party was conveyed by automobile to the west side of the city and over its principal streets. A stop was made at Montana and Granite streets, where a speaker's stand had been erected. Seated upon this stand while the president was addressing a great throng of people were the guests at the breakfast and others. The president was here introduced by Governor Norris and made about a half-hour speech. His remarks were directed principally to the importance of international arbitration. From here the president was driven to the depot.

At Livingston. Livingston, Oct. 19.—President Taft arrived here at 4 p. m. and made a short address on the tariff to 2,000 people who had gathered to greet him. He was introduced by Governor Norris. He left for Billings after a brief stop.

THERE WAS ONCE A MAN—ARE YOU LIKE HIM?

There was once a man who counted himself progressive, keen, alert and, above all, systematic; and he was all of these things, except that he didn't know how to buy and install his filing equipment.

When he wanted some new electrical apparatus, he was wise enough to send for the engineers and have his needs sized up and equipment installed accordingly. When his superintendent informed him that a new lighting system was required, illuminating experts were called in and he profited by their experience.

But in buying filing equipment he was not so far-sighted. He bought this cabinet and that from glib salesmen who called—a letter file from one, a card cabinet from another and bill files from others. The so-called systems he devised himself, and being a busy man, they didn't hang together very well.

A "Y. & E." man looked over his office; found he had twice as much cabinet equipment as he needed; proceeded to eliminate useless equipment; and by organizing and combining systems he devised a few simple, efficient methods which got results.

The entire "Y. & E." organization is built on the idea of giving the customer the filing system his business needs. Every man who sells "Y. & E." equipment knows how to render this service to every customer. Just 'phone us and we will call. This puts you under no obligation.

SHOULD LET OURSELVES GO

The Sincere Man Acts Promptly and Courageously and So Lives His Own Life.

It very often happens that we have a thought, but are afraid to express it, lest it seem absurd to others. A song begins to sing itself in our heart, but we hush it lest our friends say, "What a trifling thing, to be sure." We have in our soul the prompting of a generous act, but we hesitate and forego it, for fear we may appear sentimental, when, if we had been true to ourselves and uttered the thought, sung the song, done the generous thing, we, too, might have won the applause of men no less than that higher reward, the approval of our own nature.

The sincere man trusts himself. What he thinks he is confident is at least worthy of expression, and what he is prompted to do he is certain must be right. He acts promptly and frankly and courageously, and so lives his own life and permits his soul its own efflorescence and fruiting. He lets himself "go."

After all, we are and can be only ourselves. If we are to advance or to be anything we must let ourselves "go." We cannot by taking thought add a cubit to our intellectual stature. What we are, we are, and we can only make the most of ourselves by letting "go" and going as far as possible.—Columbia (S. C.) State.

A Long, Long Time.

"Why, how dare you try to kiss me!" she exclaimed. "I have known you less than a week."
"How long do you have to know a man before you permit him to kiss you?"
"It depends on the man."
"Well, how long would you wish to know me before you would let me kiss you?"
"I should have to know you a long, long time."
"What do you call a long, long time?"
"Five minutes longer, at the very least, than I've known you."

NEW YEAR MILL STARTS THURSDAY

LARGE BODY OF RICH ORE EN-COUNTERED—MAIDEN IS TAKING NEW LIFE.

After a decade of idleness, the old New Year mine is again about to be operating in all departments, and operated in all departments, and much-abused property will play the leading role in the rejuvenation of the one time famous Maiden mining district, which has indulged in a Rip Van Winkle slumber for these many years. The Maiden mining district, and the town itself, have only lived in the memory of the old-timer for more than a score of years. It has been held by prominent mining men acquainted with the country that there are yet as good mines in the district as those famous old properties that were responsible for the flourishing condition of Maiden many years ago.

For the past few years the district has been showing some signs of coming to life. Many prospectors have been prowling about the hills for the past few years and have been getting a number of properties opened up in a way that will have a tendency to induce the investment of outside capital. The starting up of the New Year, it is hoped, will mark the initial step toward making the almost abandoned town of Maiden again blossom out as a real live mining camp.

Will Start Thursday.

A. L. Losenger, manager for the Rheingold Mining company, which company is operating the New Year property, was in the city Saturday, and stated to the Democrat man that everything is now in readiness to start the big mill. The trial test of the mill and tramways was made yesterday and everything run as smoothly as when the mill was first operated. The day set for starting permanently is next Thursday morning. Mr. Losenger has had a force of about thirty men employed in the mine and getting the mill ready for many months past, and that force has been doubled this week.

Strike Good Ore. A few weeks ago a big body of high-grade cyaniding ore was encountered on the north end of the New Year mine and a force of men have been busily engaged blocking out the ore. They have gone into the ore some fifteen feet and have not yet passed through the body. Much of this ore is now on the dump and will be milled as soon as the mill is started up. The capacity of the mill is 400 tons per day and is easily the biggest in the county. It will be run to its full capacity within a short time. There is said to be sufficient rich ore in sight to run the mill for many months.

Career of the New Year.

Perhaps there is not a mining property in Fergus county that has had such a varied career or has been so greatly abused as the New Year. It was originally owned and located by A. D. Harmon and W. G. Norman, of this city, in 1893. Shortly after the mine was located, Frank Wright secured the interest of Mr. Harmon, and in 1896, Messrs. Wright and Norman erected a small mill and worked the property very profitably. In 1897, A. S. Wright engineered a deal by which the New Year was transferred to E. W. Johnson, of Denver, who erected the present well-equipped mill and tramway and made other substantial improvements, as well as doing considerable development work. About two years later the property passed into the hands of St. Paul parties, who did little or nothing toward its development. Internal dissention arose among the new owners shortly after acquiring the property. The failure of the members of the company to agree resulted in the property becoming involved in litigation and a receiver was appointed and took charge. Joseph Meredith was appointed receiver and the property was in his hands up to last October, when the affairs of the company were finally settled up. After the property was taken out of the hands of the receiver, A. S. Wright, who always had great faith in the New Year, interested Chicago capitalists, the present owners, and the Rheingold Mining company was organized and bought the property, taking immediate charge. Mr. Wright, who has been more or less identified with the New Year for many years and has always prophesied that, with the proper management, the New Year would become a great producer, and it now looks as though his prophecy was about to be realized.

The progress and development of the New Year will be watched with great interest by the mining interests of the county, as on its success or failure greatly depends the future development of the oldest mining district in this section of the state.

YOUNG BRIDE GIVES IT UP

Found Sporting Page Dope Too Deep When She Tried to Study Baseball.

She was a bride of six weeks. She had married a baseball fan, and on leaving the house that morning he had appealed to her to look at the sporting news in the paper and try to catch on to the game. She was a loving, dutiful bride. She sat down and read: "Jim then rushed in and swung for Joe's body."
"Joe administered a corn-dodger on the ear."
"Jim dodged for a moment and then got in a clean left and got away without a return."
"Joe followed him, and seeing an opening, dropped his man on the mat for the count of seven."
"When Jim arose he fell into a clinch and soon recovered his wind."
"At this point there were cheers for both."
"When the referee had separated them Joe planted a haymaker on Jim's chin and Jim returned one on the solar plexus."
"The crowd went wild with excitement."
"Both men came together with a determination to end things. They were glaring like tigers, and—"
And right here the bride broke down, threw the paper aside, and ran to her mother to exclaim: "Mamma, there must be a divorce, for I can never understand baseball, and Fred will be mad at me!"
