EXPENSE OF A NAVAL WAR

The Warships Indiana and Resolute

Area Which Would Be Two Hundred Thousand Dollars

Worth of Armament

At Newport on Friday the naval officers assembled on the deck of the Indiana, which is the largest ship in the navy, to inspect the armament and gunners. The officers were from the Indiana and the Zealous, which are the two ships that are to be sent to the Mediterranean. The guns are considered to be the heaviest in the navy, and are said to be worth two hundred thousand dollars.

The officers were shown the armament of the Indiana, which consists of two decks of guns, with a total of fifty-six guns. The guns are mounted on the deck and in the forecastle, and are capable of firing a round shot of sixty-pounder. The officers were also shown the gunners, who are said to be the best in the navy.

The Indiana is considered to be the strongest ship in the navy, and is said to be able to withstand any attack. The officers were shown the armament of the Zealous, which consists of forty guns, with a total weight of two hundred thousand dollars. The officers were also shown the gunners, who are said to be the best in the navy.

The officers were also shown the armament of the Zealous, which consists of forty guns, with a total weight of two hundred thousand dollars. The officers were also shown the gunners, who are said to be the best in the navy. The officers were also shown the armament of the Indiana, which consists of two decks of guns, with a total of fifty-six guns. The guns are mounted on the deck and in the forecastle, and are capable of firing a round shot of sixty-pounder. The officers were also shown the gunners, who are said to be the best in the navy.