A Proclamation

Education is becoming well-nigh universal in America. The rapidity of its expansion within the past half century has no precedent. Our system of public instruction, administered by State and local officers, is peculiarly suited to our habits of life and to our plan of government, and it has brought forth abundant fruit.

In some favored localities only one, or two, or three persons in a thousand and between the ages of 16 and 20 are classed as illiterate. High schools and academies easily accessible are offering to the youth of America a greater measure of education than that which the founders of the Nation received from Harvard, William and Mary, Yale, and Princeton; and so widely diffused has advanced study become that the bachelor's degree is no longer a symbol of unusual learning.

All this is reason for gratification; but in the contemplation of worthy achievement we must still be mindful that full provision has not yet been made throughout the country for education of either elementary, secondary, or higher grade. Large numbers have not been reached by the blessings of education. The efficiency of the schools in rural communities is, in general, relatively low; too often their equipment is meagre, their teachers poorly prepared, and their terms short. High schools, notwithstanding their extraordinary growth, have not kept pace with the demand for instruction; even in great cities many students are restricted to half-time attendance, and in outlying districts such schools are frequently insufficient in number or inadequate in quality. In higher education the possibilities of existing institutions have been reached and it is essential that their facilities be extended or that junior colleges in considerable numbers be established.

These deficiencies leave no room for complacency. The utmost endeavor must be exerted to provide for every child in the land the full measure of education which his need and capacity demand; and none must be permitted to live in ignorance. Marked benefit has come in recent years from nation-wide campaigns for strengthening public sentiment for universal education, for upholding the hands of constituted school authorities, and for promoting meritorious legislation in behalf of the schools. Such revivals are wholesome and should continue.

Now, THEREFORE, I, Calvin Coolidge, President of the United States, do proclaim the week beginning November sixteenth as American Education Week, and I urge that it be observed throughout the United States. I recommend that the Governors of several states issue proclamations setting forth the necessity of education to a free people and requesting that American Education Week be appropriately celebrated in their respective States. I urge further that local officers, civic, social, and religious organizations, and citizens of every occupation contribute with all their strength to the advance of education, and that they make of American Education Week a season of mutual encouragement in promoting that enlightenment upon which the Nation depends.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done in the City of Washington on this 18th day of September in the (SEAL) year of our Lord One Thousand Nine Hundred and Twenty-five and of the Independence of the United States One Hundred and Fiftieth.

CALVIN COOLIDGE

"NEVER THE TWAIN SHALL MEET" COMING HERE SOON

"Never the Twain Shall Meet" the Cosmopolitan Corporation's picturization of Peter B. Kyne's colorful story of the South Sea Islands, will come to the Pythian Theatre on November 15th. It is distributed by Metro-Goldwyn.

Anita Stewart, in this picture, appears for the first time as a Tahitian girl, Tamea, and it is said to be her most unusual role. Bert Lytell plays the part of the hero, an American who falls in love with the wild, half-caste maiden in spite of himself. Justine Johnstone, whom England considers "the perfect American blonde," is a society girl in the picture, the fiancée of Dan Pritchard (Bert Lytell). Then there are Huntly Gordin, George Siegmann, Lionel Belmore, Florence Turner, William Norris, Emily Fitzroy, and Princess Marie de Bourbon to complete the distinguished cast.

The new film, directed by Maurice Tourneur, who made that interesting photoplay of the Sargasso sea, "The Isle of Lost Ships," was actually filmed, for the most part, in Tahiti and Moorea, two of the best-known islands of the South Sea group. Practically four months were consumed in production.

The Stanford team will meet the locals here Saturday afternoon when it is hoped that they will be in the same condition as the Belt boys last Saturday. Such being the case they may not have such an easy time carrying home the bacon.

Lucky Accident

The local representative of the J. I. Case company narrowly escaped a serious accident on Saturday. He was coming down the Riceville road at a fair rate of speed in his Chevrolet roadster and had reached a point near the guard rail north of the Tuara residence when his car left the road and started to climb the cut bank on the right hand side of the road. The car fell in the attempt and toppled over backwards while the occupant crouched below the wheel. He then succeeded in extricating himself from the wreckage and took the next car for Belt.

Various people stopped at the wreck and many searched in vain for someone imprisoned beneath it.

The car was later brought to the Pioneer garage where it was repaired. The damage consisted of a broken front wheel, a bent axle, bent steering post shattered wind-shield and broken top.
