Julius Paulson has returned from a pleasure trip to Portland, Oregon where he accompanied his mother on a visit to his sister, Elisabeth. Judging by his physical condition when he returned he had a good time. He certainly accumulated some extra weight and reports the roses as beginning to bloom in Portland and the winter wheat as standing quite high in the field of Oregon. During his absence Wallace and Carl Gustafson looked after the ranch. Mrs. Paulson will not return for some weeks.

Sunny Jim Says

Take it from me
Who have toiled thirty years in a grocery
Well, I guess I know what it ought to be,
I reckon I've had a chance to see
Something of every kind and degree
That goes in a grocery.
Why, he who isn't honest and frank and free
To give his customers honest
Weight and flavor and qualtee
He isn't a man that can train with me,
No, Sir-ree.
But when Dahl says to me
There is our name and our guarantee
I know just what it means, you see
Take it from me
Who have worked thirty years in a grocery.
